Man with nail in his head can still walk, talk, think

By MARY BROWNFIELD

WHEN SHERIFF'S Deputy Greg Clark responded to a call at a Quail Meadows construction site June 2, he found a man with a self-inflicted wound to the right side of his head. From a nail gun.

"It was an intentional act," Clark said. "You'd have to be pretty desperate to shoot yourself in the head with a nail gun."

Paramedics were loading the man — whose name is not being released by The Pine Cone — into the ambulance when Clark arrived. The victim's brother also works at the site with four other construction workers.

"All the guys that were there were pretty upset," Clark said.

Joe Sherburn, the construction job foreman, said he did not want to comment on the accident in order to protect the worker and his brother. "It was pretty awful," he said.

The patient was transported to CHOMP, where he is currently in stable condition. Clark said he was able to follow up with the man at the hospital shortly after the incident.

"He seemed to be doing OK," he said. "He was talking, walking, thinking and

Moratorium looms again

By TAMARA GRIPPI

IN AN unexpected move June 8, the Carmel City Council decided to reconsider a city-wide moratorium on renovations to any house built before 1950 — two months after they narrowly rejected such a proposal amid public outcry.

Council member Sue McCloud — who voted against the temporary ban on demolitions and alterations at the April 6 council meeting — proposed the emergency moratorium to speed up the city's effort to make its historic preservation program comply with state law.

McCloud and other council members were dismayed to learn that the city's consultant, Jones and Stokes, estimates it will take 15 months to set up a new historic preservation program and complete an environmental impact report (EIR) on that program.

McCloud said if the city staff could bring back a proposal that shortens the process to 10 months, she would be willing to support a moratorium for that time period.

Such an emergency moratorium could be approved on a temporary basis for 45 days and then extended for as long as two years, according to Carmel City Administrator Jere Kersnar.

"Our community is looking for leadership to bring some closure," McCloud said. "They're tired of these drawn-out processes," she said, noting that the planning department is short-staffed and already burdened with several other major projects.

Carmel Planning Director Brian Roseth agreed that working on individual applications of homes older than 50 years is already consuming 30 percent of staff time.

"You can't walk down the hall and not hear a conversation going on about this," Roseth said. "We have to explain the protocols to everyone we meet. As a result we don't have time to do other things."

TOURISM, SALARIES HOT TOPICS IN CARMEL BUDGET DEBATE

By TAMARA GRIPPI

AS THE Carmel City Council heads into budget deliberations this year, the debate over the annual grant of $100,000 for the Carmel Business Association's marketing program is already heating up.

During the council's budget hearings June 3 and June 10, the CBA's visitor promotion program was just one of the topics that stirred debate. Other major issues included raccoons, salaries and storm and street repairs.

Jan Hanson, executive director of the CBA, urged the council to sign on with the marketing program for another year.

"California is the number one destination in the United States," Hanson said. "Sixty-five percent of those interviewed do want to go to communities near the beach. We can influence the decisions of those travelers."

The CBA contracts with Beverly Hills-based public relations firm Murphy O'Brien in order to get exposure in national magazines.

The city council — which began supporting the marketing program in 1995 — is debating whether the grant is a good use of money during a tight year.

"I'm going to be looking very hard at that

Don McBride, owner of this 450-square-foot, 77-year-old home, is worried that his expansion and renovation plans will be held up if a moratorium on older homes is passed. He doesn't yet have a building permit, and until he does his project can be stopped by a moratorium.

'PART SWIMMER, PART SHOWGIRL'

By MARY BROWNFIELD

KERSTEN WEHDE should have been born a fish.

"I am part amphibian, part human," said Wehde, who has been swimming since she was 5 years old. A graduating senior at Carmel High School, she will attend UC San Diego next year.

"It's funny how far she's come because the first time she did a race that involved two laps, when she got to the wall, she waited for everyone to get there and then swam back," said her mom, Mari Wehde. "She was just 6 when she did that." Even with the mid-race pause, she won.

Although she doesn't really have gills or fins, Wehde has only lost two events in her entire high school swimming career. She was recently named Athlete of the Year by CHS.

"It's just one of those things that gets into your blood," said Mari Wehde.

Her specialty is the backstroke, but her coach, Diane Whitesides, said her talent carries over to everything.

"She's capable of winning any event," Whitesides said. "She's definitely a four-stroke swimmer — she can do it all." She's in the Central Coast Section finals every year.

"Just having one Kersten Wehde on the relay team drops your time to where you automatically make the cut," Whitesides said.

'The ham'

Athletic prowess aside, Wehde brings levity to the pool, Whitesides said.

"She keeps things funny, so she'll probably split her time between the Olympics and Broadway — part swimmer, part showgirl," she said. "She hasn't been on stage yet, but she's a ham."

And Wehde single-handedly instigated Bikini Practice Day. "It drives the boys' team crazy — it's disruptive,"

Judge orders city to grant variance

By PAUL MILLER

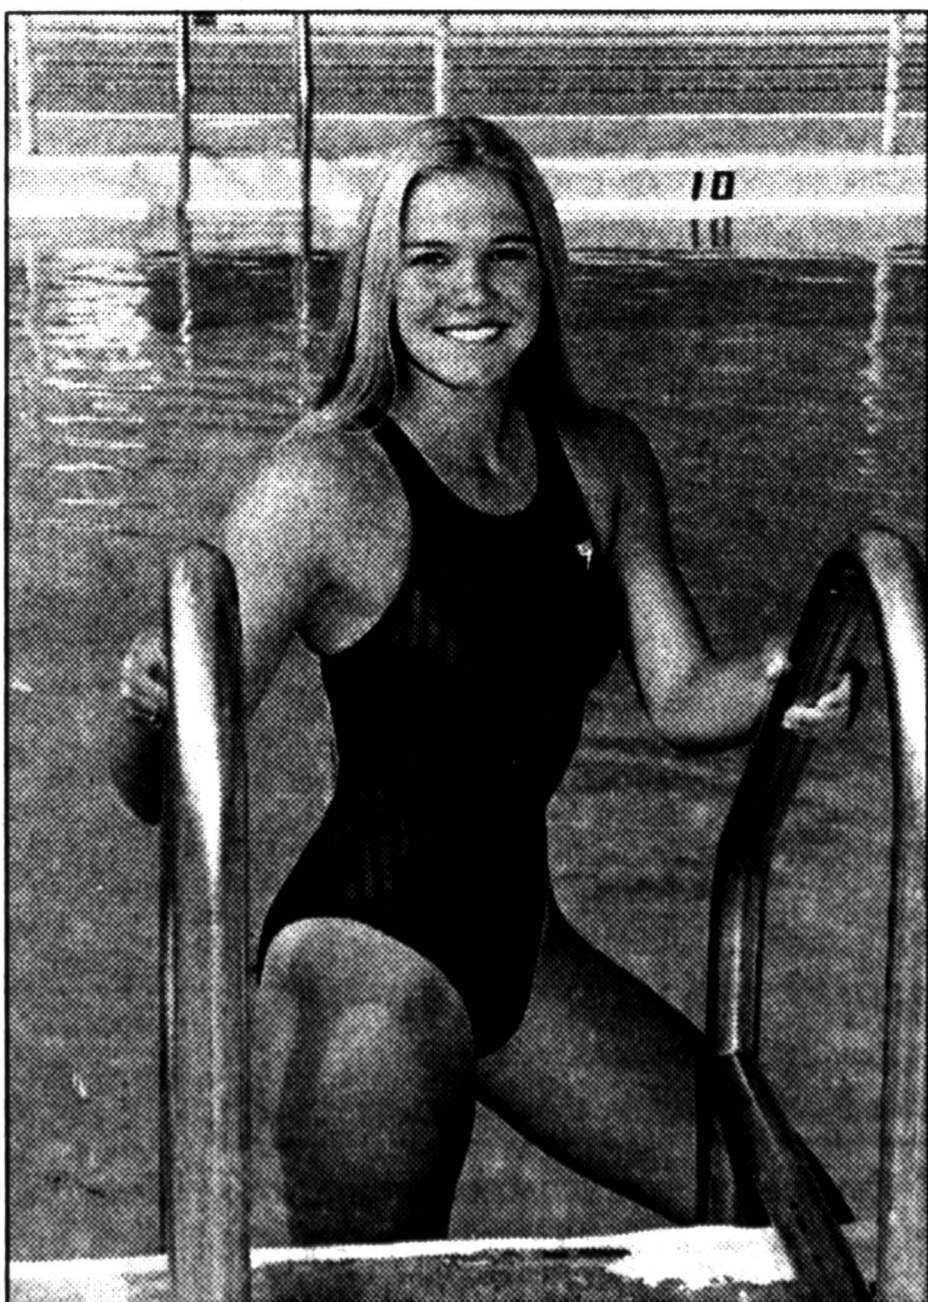

AN UNPRECEDENTED decision ordering the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea to approve a two-story addition for a San Antonio Avenue home was issued by Monterey County Superior Court Judge William D. Curtis June 7.

Orville and Elena Golub, both in their 80s, first proposed in 1992 to expand the contemporary home they built in 1972 next to Carmel Beach.

The home, designed by noted architect Henry Hill, contains a "reverse floor plan," Judge Curtis noted in his decision, "with the primary living space on the second floor." Due to health problems, the Golubs, who live in Westwood, sought permission to install an elevator and expand the second floor.

The Golubs' 32-foot-tall home conformed with the city's zoning code when it was constructed. But the height limit in their neighborhood was subsequently lowered to 18 feet and in 1997, after a prolonged series of hearings, the

By KIRSTIE WILDE

SIDNEY READE started her career at the Mid Valley Fire Station as a 23-year-old volunteer in 1976, but the desire to "grow up to be a firefighter" was kindled more than a decade earlier by her next-door neighbor, who happened to be the fire chief. He'd let 10-year old Sidney jump in the front seat beside him and they'd roar off to answer the emergency call together.

Now Reade is the boss; she was named chief of the Mid Carmel Valley Fire Protection District on June 7. She bested four other finalists who were recruited from outside the department to compete for the job left vacant when Chief Gary Carmichael retired last September. Reade certainly had experience on her side: She has held every position in the department, from secretary, to volunteer, to firefighter, to captain, to fire marshal in her 23 years on the job. Now she will supervise the 40-person force and manage its $1.2 million budget.

Sidney Reade (pictured with her son Spencer in 1983) began her career as the office secretary and volunteer firefighter at Mid Valley Fire Station in 1976. She was named fire chief June 7.

"But if I have to hop on an ambulance in an emergency, I will," Reade told The Pine Cone. "That's the attitude that makes this place work so well."

One of Reade's highest priorities is ensuring the safest possible environment for local children, a priority brought home when her own child was killed in an accident.

It happened right there at the Mid Valley Fire Station; a volleyball pole had worked itself loose and fell, striking Reade's 4-year-old son Jeff in the chest. The firefighters used all their skills to try to save the boy, but did not succeed.

"I've come to realize that no matter what you do, accidents are going to happen," Reade said. But she has devoted her career

'If I have to hop on an ambulance in an emergency, I will. That's the attitude that makes this place work so well.'

to upgrading not only the emergency training for herself and her staff, but also the preparedness of the community.

She's been active in fire and emergency medical training, serving as co-director and instructor of the Monterey Peninsula College Firefighter Academy, teaching pre-hospital emergency medical courses for the Monterey County Health Department, teaching at the American Heart Association and the American Red Cross. She's well known at local public and private schools for her presentations on fire safety, CPR, even HIV awareness and drivers' training.

THE HAND MADEN 620 LIGHTHOUSE AVENUE PACIFIC GROVE • 373-5353

From nuclear submarine repair specialist to proprietor of a fabrics shop? Jeanne Graham began sewing her own school clothing as a child, unaware that her life's path would lead her into the United States Navy. After retiring with twenty years of military service, Jeanne noticed that the Hand Maden, a Pacific Grove fabrics and sewing shop, was for sale. Then she discovered Monterey County Bank. "They were so very helpful," Jeanne recalls. "They worked right beside me in helping me qualify for SBA financing. Now I'm looking forward to my husband and daughter joining me in operating the Hand Maden." Of course, should anyone happen to have a nuclear submarine in disrepair, Jeanne might be available for that sort of service too.

Police & Sheriff's Log

Kids' potato launcher confiscated

HERE'S A look at some of the significant calls logged by the Carmel-by-the-Sea Police Department and the Monterey County Sheriff's Department last week.

SUNDAY, MAY 30

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Report of a high-pitched noise in the area of Dolores and Santa Lucia. A thorough area check was conducted and the sound was coming from hundreds of harmonic frogs — "a symphony of croaks."

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Man at San Carlos and Ocean had a heart attack and was not breathing. CPR performed, life saved.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Woman at Ocean and Lincoln passed out and fell. CFD and ambulance responded. Woman transported to the hospital.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Report of a suspicious "transient" at Ocean and San Carlos. Located a man and a woman sitting and playing musical instrument. No violation.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Person who had been drinking was yelling and swearing in Piccadilly Park, causing a disruption to businesses. He was contacted and decided to spend the rest of the night at home.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Art consultant has retained paintings on consignment. The owner of the paintings has reportedly been unhappy with the consultant and has been calling her continually and slandering her. Owner advised to contact an attorney.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Man was found intoxicated to the point of being unable to care for himself. He was taken into custody and transported to MPD for housing. He was later released on a citation.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Report of keys found in the passenger door of a vehicle. Vehicle locked and keys taken to station. Owner arrived at station to pick up the keys.

Carmel area: A SCUBA driver in distress ditched his weight belt and made an emergency uncontrolled ascent in 50 feet of water. He blew his distress whistle upon breaking the surface about 200 feet from Monastery Beach. Two nearby divers came to his aid and towed him back to the beach, where he was treated by paramedics.

Pebble Beach: Patio Drive resident died in his sleep as a result of cardiac arrest. He had a history of heart disease and had recently been hospitalized.

Carmel Valley: Man contacted at the CHOMP emergency room after he was taken there because he got punched in the face while at a party. He suffered a bloody lip and a cut on city council rejected the Golubs' building plan.

Because of its height, the Golubs' house was a "non-conforming use," the council said, and the home's upper floor could not be expanded.

Judge Curtis reversed that decision and ordered the city to approve the Golubs' application.

"Mrs. Golub was enormously relieved when I told her about the decision," said attorney Vanessa Vallarta, who represented the Golubs. "She and her husband will finally be able to fulfill their dream of spending more time in Carmel."

"The city's conduct was outrageous — that's what comes through in the decision," Vallarta added. "The court clearly felt that the government has to deal with people on a fairer basis."

The Golubs still have a legal claim pending against the city — one that charges Carmel with violating their civil rights and their rights under the Americans with Disabilities Act. According to Vallarta, that claim could result in a jury handing Carmel a hefty bill for damages and attorneys' fees.

"We'll wait and see how the city responds to this ruling before deciding what to do next," she said.

Carmel City Attorney Don Freeman said he had "briefly" reviewed the decision and that the city would be assessing its options.

Abstract art by 2-year-olds goes on display

SIXTEEN 2-YEAR-olds have had their abstract artwork framed and hung at Hairpin Alley, a hair salon located between San Carlos and Ocean, down the pathway to the left of Pacific Rim and then upstairs.

Charlene Smythe, artist and hairstylist, is having an opening reception for the young painters at her salon from 11 a.m. to noon Sunday, June 13.

The artists attend the Child Development Center at Carmelo School, whose teachers, Laurie Schimmel and Lesley Mick with volunteer Smythe have coordinated the show.

Council postpones souvenir ban to make it stricter

By TAMARA GRIPPI

THE CARMEL City Council postponed passing a ban on souvenir stores at its June 8 meeting in order to beef up the new law by cracking down on window displays of souvenir T-shirts.

The council voted unanimously to revise the ordinance so that clothing stores without souvenir use permits won't be able to display novelty shirts, shorts and sweatshirts in their front windows and doorways.

The city council does not want to see souvenir T-shirts in the windows or doorways of Carmel clothing stores.

The new law will also wipe out the category of souvenir stores from the city's books. That means no new stores selling "impulse" items aimed at tourists, such as Carmel T-shirts and memorabilia, will be allowed to open downtown.

Souvenir stores already in business will remain "frozen in space, frozen in time and frozen in size," according to Carmel Planning Director Brian Roseth. And once those stores close, they'll be gone for good.

The proposed law would also create a new classification for holiday stores so that they would no longer be lumped in the souvenir store category.

A citizen's committee, the Commercial Advisory Task Force, spent two years studying ways to eliminate souvenir T-shirt sales in Carmel. At the June 8 meeting, task force member Linda Anderson urged the council to adopt the stricter ordinance regulating window displays.

Anderson told the council that her task force "walked the entire business district twice looking at window displays and store design."

"Tasteful window displays make the difference between an ordinary or an extraordinary business district."

Carmel City Attorney Don Freeman advised the council that the city should not-fy all clothing merchants who would be affected before adopting such an ordinance.

The council voted to continue the souvenir ban discussions until its July meeting.

MORATORIUM

Playing it safe

After the moratorium — which required a four-fifths majority to pass — failed at the city council in April, the planning department tightened up their rules on remodels and demolitions of houses 50 years and older.

Roseth said the new set of "protocols" is the only way to comply with California Environmental Quality Act (CEQA).

City officials learned a year ago that Carmel's historic ordinance conflicts with state environmental laws. The playing field changed after a 1997 California appeals court ruled that the City of Oakland could not tear down an abandoned Montgomery Ward department store without first preparing an EIR to analyze the building's historic importance.

And last September, Enid Sales and a group called Friends of Carmel Cultural Heritage sued the city on that basis, charging Carmel with "engaging in an unlawful pattern" of allowing demolitions.

The lawsuit specifically targeted the city's decision to allow Ron and Alexis Donati to demolish their 75-year-old house on San Antonio — a decision that Monterey County Judge Robert O'Farrell upheld in a ruling released last month.

However, a hearing hasn't yet been set on Sales' request that the court impose a judicial moratorium on demolitions, according to Carmel City Attorney Don Freeman. That petition may become moot if the city approves a moratorium anyway.

A rock and a hard place

The council will vote on the moratorium and a shortened schedule to implement the new historic preservation program at the July 13 meeting. The last time the council debated the moratorium a crowd of architects, real estate brokers and homeowners protested.

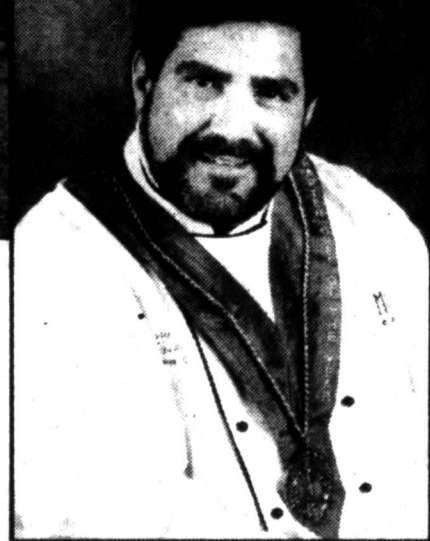

Kersnar explained that, like other California cities, Carmel has been put in a tough spot.

"We, the City of Carmel, are not making this stuff up," Kersnar said. "We are caught in case law and guidelines of CEQA. We are trying to protect homeowners from future litigations."

At this point several property owners have renovation and demolition projects in various stages of the city's approval process.

"It will be an important decision as to which ones the moratorium would affect," Roseth said. "If someone has a building permit, the project is free and clear. Anything short of that is potentially stoppable."

everything else."

Clark said he has encountered injuries inflicted by nail guns before, though none in the head.

"That type of accident happens quite frequently — people are shot with nail guns quite often," he said. While they usually occur accidentally, sometimes the wounds are inflicted on purpose, most often during a fight.

Challenge for neurosurgeon

Although he is in stable condition and reportedly doing well, the injured man remains at the hospital while a local neurosurgeon conducts several tests to determine the best way to deal with the nail.

"Removing it can be dangerous, particularly if it's in an area near a blood vessel," said a local neurosurgeon who wished to speak anonymously. "It [the nail] can be in such a location that it's keeping the vessel closed."

In such cases, leaving a foreign object inside the brain is an option.

"If you know the thing that went in is dirty to start with, you worry about infection," he said. "You have to treat people with aggressive antibiotics."

Even when antibiotics are administered, an abscess can form around the injured area. "Sometimes people will be led to take it out earlier rather than later," the neurosurgeon said. "Location dictates whether that's practical or not."

Historic Cypress Inn one step closer to redo

By MARY BROWNFIELD

A COMPREHENSIVE project involving the Cypress Inn, the nearby Holiday House and the Morgan studio site got a boost June 9 when the Carmel Planning Commission voted to recommend historic designation of two of the buildings but not the third.

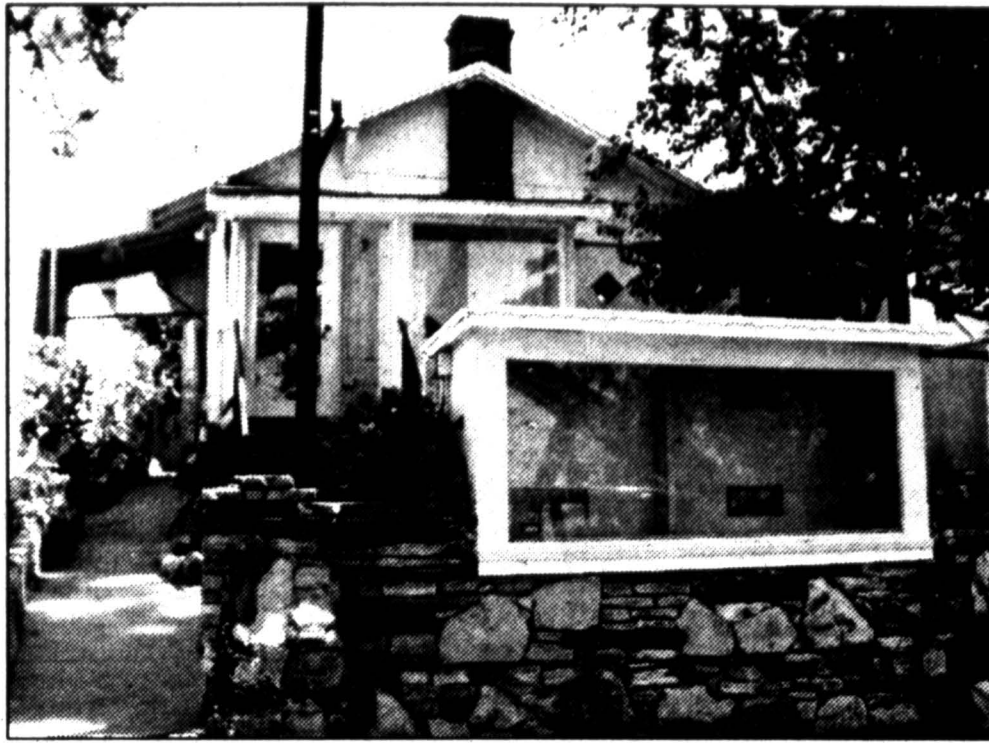

The commission voted unanimously that the Cypress Inn and the Holiday House are ripe for historic designation, an assertion supported by the citizen-run Historic Preservation Committee.

The Mary DeNeale Morgan studio, however, is not a historic building, the commission decided. Although the original studio was built for the artist in 1904, it has been moved and changed several times, depleting its historic integrity.

The commission decided the site — not the building — is historic due to Morgan's contributions to Carmel's artistic heritage and her involvement in the creation of Devendorf park. The preservation committee agreed.

Although the building will be demolished, a "living tribute" to Morgan, which will include photographs and artwork, will be erected at the site. "I'm heartened by this," said Commissioner Robin Wilson. "I think this is an excellent revision."

Carmel attorney Jim Heisinger represented the applicant — Cypress Inn Investors, a group that includes Chris Tescher and Denny LeVett — and asked the commission to specify that the historic designation be revoked if the applicants' future design plans are not approved. The commissioners had no objection.

The Mary McNeale Morgan studio, slated to be demolished, now sits on Lincoln Street, next door to the Cypress Inn.

"I have a carrot here — we'll save the Holiday House and designate the Cypress Inn," Tescher told commissioners. "But I don't want to get into the position of doing that and then somewhere down the permit process, the project gets skewered and I get stuck with a designated property I can't do anything with."

Milestones

FRANCES HARRIET GILMORE, 73, a Carmel resident since 1976, died May 2. She is survived by three daughters, Jan Gilmore Proud of San Francisco, Dena McMurray of Madera and Lisa Gilmore of La Jolla, as well as six grandchildren. Mrs. Gilmore was preceded in death in 1983 by her husband, noted artist Jack G. Gilmore. Memorial contributions are suggested to Hospice House of Monterey or the Audubon Society.

MADELEINE C. CHAFFEY, a 33-year resident of Carmel, died June 4. She was 87. Mrs. Chaffey, a graduate of the University of Southern California, is survived by her husband, A.E. Stewart Chaffey of Carmel, son Andrew Chaffey of Nevada, daughter Kathleen Thompson of Orinda and three grandchildren.

NAN PEACH GRAIN, 85, a Pacific Grove resident who previously made her home in Carmel for 50 years, died June

8. Mrs. Grain is survived by her husband, Elmer J. Grain of Pacific Grove; her sister, Eleanor Fagan of Pacific Grove, and a brother, James Compton Beach of Maryland. Memorial services are pending. Memorials are suggested to the Parkinson's Disease Center or the Yellow Brick Road shop of Carmel.

BEVERLY ANN (PATTI) GANNETT, 71, a retired advertising executive and former resident of Carmel, died April 28. She spent most of her career in the San Francisco headquarters of the Roos-Atkins department store chain. Local survivors include her aunt, Wilma Anderson of Carmel. Memorials are suggested to the World Wildlife Fund.

The group has already submitted its design plans to the Carmel Building and Planning Department and the planning commission will review them in late July or early August, according to Planner Chip Rerig.

On tap for the properties are a new, 110-seat restaurant and an expansion of the existing hotel. The Morgan studio would be demolished to make way for the inn's expanded floor area. The Holiday House will be returned to its original use as a single-family residence.

Council worries that alien invasion will threaten calm of Carmel Beach

By TAMARA GRIPPI

ORGANIZERS OF Films in the Forest who worked to bring "Plan 9 from Outer Space" to Carmel Beach were a little surprised to learn there was any panic over the impending alien visit June 12.

"We pulled permits and we thought we'd done everything the city required," said Roger Parkes, president of the Forest Theater Guild. "There have even been two or three stories about the film on the beach in The Pine Cone."

But at the Carmel City Council meeting June 8, some council members were more concerned about viewers' nighttime frolics on the beach than they were about the impending doom perpetrated by aliens and zombies.

"We're trying to reduce parties at the beach," said Carmel City Councilwoman Barbara Livingston. "Here we are endorsing Films in the Forest who are putting on a night event at the beach."

The Forest Theater Guild asked the council to contribute $500 to sponsor the showing of "Treasure Island" at Devendorf Park on Aug. 14 during the fifth annual film festival. While the council voted unanimously to support the Devendorf Park movie, some members argued that in the future, the sands of Carmel Beach should be protected from crowds flocking to see flicks such as the 1958 classic "Plan 9" which has been called the worst movie of all time.

"I like the spirit of it," said City Councilman Marshall Hydorn. "It's something a little different (showing a movie) in the park. But I think we owe the beach every protection we can give it."

Livingston was particularly concerned

'Basically it's not a violation to go down to the beach, put up a film projector and show a film.'

— Carmel Police Lt. Bill Uretsky that the "Plan 9" event had been advertised in areas outside Carmel, such as Pacific Grove. Parkes explained that Grove Homescapes — which is a sponsor of the event — had been handing out fliers. However, after the council meeting, that has stopped, Parkes said.

The Carmel Police Department granted the theater guild permission to show the outdoor movies. Livingston, however, argued that the city council and the Forest and Beach Commission should have been consulted.

Carmel Police Lt. Bill Uretsky, who granted the permit to the film guild, said that the city doesn't have any laws that prevent people from gathering at the beach.

"Basically it's not a violation to go down to the beach, put up a film projector and show a film," Uretsky said. "As long as you're not selling tickets and charging people, there isn't a problem."

This is the first year Films in the Forest will include movie showings at the beach and park. "We wanted to show two movies that are free for residents," Parkes said. "We intended it as a gift for the city."

Parkes pointed out that Carmel's regulations will be in full effect during the June 12 event.

The beach closes at 10 p.m. and only residents with stickers are allowed to park along Scenic Road after sunset, Uretsky said.

"Most of the people watching the movie will be residents who walked down to the beach," Uretsky said.

The film begins at about 8:40 p.m. June 12. "Our goal is to be out of there as close to 10 p.m. as possible," Parkes said.

It will be close, since the movie is 77 minutes long.

Assemblyman
Peter Frusetta

COWBOY IN THE CAPITOL

by Peter Frusetta

What beautiful weather we are having! Cool evenings, temperate days, clear blue skies — California has, indeed, a wonderful climate. We passed a lot of liberal bills in the Assembly this week. Senator Johannassen stopped by to visit. He said the Senate passed 197 bills last week. Ninety-five percent have Democrat authors.

The ball is now in the governor's court. During the campaign, Governor Davis vowed to take moderate stances. He will be tested. Many of the bills we are seeing were killed last year. With the lop-sided Democratic legislature — and a Democratic Governor — the people of California will soon become aware of a big difference in our laws.

The politicians just discovered a $4 billion budget surplus. Now greed raises its ugly head. The question is "What to do with it?" Some want to spend it on more social programs (each has a pet project). I want to eliminate the yearly auto licensing fees.

Look at it this way. A citizen goes into a convenience store and buys a quart of milk. He hands the clerk a ten-dollar bill and the clerk says, "I'm keeping you change so I can resurface the parking lot. But you'll benefit because you'll park on a smooth surface with new stripping." The customer growls, "The heck with you, give me my change! I don't even own a car!"

Speaker Villaraigosa says, "We'll put the budget surplus money into schools, law enforcement and welfare. That way we'll all benefit." Let me know what do you think?

I'm not happy with the way the career politicians up here spend $80 billion of your tax money. Your surveys indicate the same! You want more money to go toward mental health (especially in helping children who show early anti-social tendencies). You want to know the causes of youth violence: how rap music, violent video games, and X-rated magazines and pornographic movies effect youth delinquency. You want to know what part broken homes and alcohol abuse play in producing young criminals.

Your calls and letters are revealing. People want better public schools. They are tired of hearing, "All we need is more money." They want fewer fancy-titled administrators, people want higher academic levels and safer campuses. Good teachers deserve more pay — poor teachers, less. Disruptive students should be removed from the general school population. Administrators shout that they want parents on campus — but encourage the opposite. They fear visitors will see defects. A mother reported filthy bathrooms, littered grounds, drug use and rowdy students intimidating peaceful student in the halls.

You constituents want Fort Ord, Camp Roberts and Hunter Liggett used for prisons. You want reasonable gun laws within the framework of our Constitution. From surveys I know your collective wants. I will forward your wishes with my votes.

Keep writing. I do my best work when I hear from You. You can see I love this job! Stop by if you are near Sacramento — you don't need an appointment, just walk on in!

Until next time — God Bless. Peter Frusetta, Peter

CAPP, CCC make peace; Buck gone

By MARGOT PETIT
NICHOLS

CARMEL'S Cultural Commission (CCC) and its Committee for Art in Public Places (CAPP) tried their best to work out ongoing differences at a June 2 joint meeting at Sunset Center, with the Cultural Commission extending a warm welcome and breakfast to the members of CAPP, who had feuded with the CCC for months.

The committee, down from seven to five members, is now one fewer with CAPP member Lacy Buck declining to sign on again because of an unwillingness to fill out Form 700, which is required by the city.

Form 700 of the Fair Political Practices Commission is a public disclosure of personal assets and income required of most government officials. Under Carmel's own conflict-of-interest code, all standing committee members must fill out the Form 700.

CAPP members did not learn about the requirement until two years after they started work. While the announcement by City Administrator Jere Kersnar in February caused distress among the seven committee members, most eventually decided to go along.

The committee is now composed of interim chair Connie Coleman, Belinda Vidor-Holliday, Cornelia Emery and Carol Spencer. Former CAPP chairman Rodney Winfield, former interim chair Miriam Rosenstein and art historian Betty Hoag McGlynn resigned earlier.

Buck's expertise on early Carmel art will not be totally lost to CAPP, according to Brian Donoghue, director of the city's Community and Cultural Department, because she can speak or offer advice on items on CAPP's agenda, but will not be able to vote.

"We don't want to lose the expertise that Lacy has to offer," he said. He added that experts can be brought in from anywhere to offer advice, "even from New York."

In an April interview, Buck told The Pine Cone, "I've never been on a committee that pleased me so much, doing something for my city and for art."

Other items discussed at the workshop were methods for selection of CAPP members, improved communications between the commission and CAPP, funding, and CAPP's work program.

While give and take was vigorous and some sort of consensus on each item seemed to be reached, Brian Donoghue closed the meeting saying an executive summary in draft form would be prepared by his office for review by the chairs of both groups.

Bill to sell Hatton Canyon dies

By KIRSTIE WILDE

ASSEMBLYMAN FRED Keeley's bill to sell Hatton Canyon to the Monterey Peninsula Regional Park District for $1 failed to get past the Appropriations Committee May 26.

AB 1344 would have turned over the land as soon as Caltrans develops an alternative to the freeway project that would unsnarl the traffic on Highway 1 between the Carmel River bridge and Highway 68.

Keeley's proposed price tag of $1 for the Hatton Canyon land was never actually possible. Because state law requires reimbursement for the tax money used to buy Hatton Canyon, the price for the land was going to be closer to $1.7 million dollars, according to Keeley.

"I just put in the $1 figure to hold a place in line for the bill because I was running out of time," he said.

The Appropriations Committee was not prepared to pass on the bill without a lot more information, including an appraisal. "I thought $1.7 million was a good number," Keeley told The Pine Cone June 10. "But I couldn't get an appraisal together in a timely fashion. I expect to bring the bill back in January with all the necessary information."

Keeley is determined to transfer the land to make sure Hatton Canyon is never contemplated as a freeway solution to the traffic mess on Highway 1. That is precisely the reason scores of locals wrote letters to the members of the Appropriations Committee protesting Keeley's bill, according to Lois Starnes of the pro-freeway group Citizens for Hatton Canyon.

'It is a ridiculous waste of millions of tax dollars to give the land away.'

— Lois Starnes

"We know the freeway will be absolutely necessary someday — if not in five years, then in 10," she said. "It is a ridiculous waste of millions of tax dollars to give the land away — it's highway robbery."

Mary Ruth Spencer agreed, telling the Appropriations Committee, "Some 40 years ago someone had foresight enough to buy Hatton Canyon to be able to handle the traffic efficiently on this Peninsula and the politicians are asking that you cancel it by giving the canyon to the Park District... The politicians against us don't even live here."

Starnes estimated that she contacted more than 1,000 freeway supporters to join a letter-writing campaign to lobby for a No vote by the Appropriations Committee.

Meanwhile, Caltrans is working in Hatton Canyon this week on its annual brush-clearing and fire road maintenance, expected to cost about $25,000 this year. Last year's work cost $175,000 because of heavy damage to the fire road by El Niño downpours, according to Val Houdyshell of Caltrans.

Residents who live above Hatton Canyon are concerned about who will pay for fire safety if the land is transferred to the regional park district. Keeley told The Pine Cone he doesn't yet know.

Commission strikes blow against apostrophobia

By MARY BROWNFIELD

GRAMMARIANS WILL be glad to hear the Carmel Planning Commission debuted as the Carmel Grammar Commission June 9, when it ruled a Carmel business must include the appropriate apostrophe in its sign: Paloosh, Gourmet Women's Clothing.

The applicants were not present at the meeting to defend their right to be grammatically incorrect. Commissioner Robin Wilson added the "appropriately placed apostrophe" as a condition of approval of the sign, which will be placed on an awning over the Ocean Avenue business.

"I think it's important for this town to have some basic literary rules gently applied," Wilson said, adding that the word

"womens," sans apostrophe, does not appear anywhere in the dictionary.

Commissioner Pope Coleman initially objected to the required apostrophe — saying business owners should be entitled to some literary freedom — but later conceded the point. The commission unanimously approved the sign with its required grammatical correctness.

"Neighbors Who Care"

What would you pay for the ® in Pebble Beach®?

IF THE superstar investor group pays $800 million for the Pebble Beach Co., don't think it's all for the golf courses, the Lodge, the Inn at Spanish Bay, 17-Mile Drive and the rest of the land and cash accounts. The value of a company is greater than the sum of the things you can see and touch. The intangible part is its good will, the portion of price which a well-informed buyer would pay to buy a business beyond those tangible items. The centerpiece of good will is trademarks (and patents in technology companies). Trademarks such as the "Pebble Beach" name, the Lone Cypress tree logo, the names of the three golf courses and so forth have enormous value.

When the Saks Fifth Avenue chain of stores was sold for $1.5 billion, about $1 billion of the value was attributed to the Saks trademarks. If every single McDonald's restaurant were to suddenly disappear, the company could simply go out and get loans to build back to an economic, worldwide juggernaut in short order. Why? Not because of the burgers, and not because they're served quickly. Major League Baseball makes $75 million a year outside its business of playing baseball and beyond the broadcast rights. It licenses its trademarks to other companies which market over 3,000 items and pay a rental fee — a royalty — for the privilege. Strong marks make the difference in what the market will bear, allowing for premium pricing, all going to the bottom line. Consider, for example, the difference in price between Bayer aspirin and generic aspirin: products with exactly the same ingredients.

So it is with Pebble Beach. Through their marks PBC creates both a rational and emotional pact with their following, creating what one commentator calls a "security of demand" to ensure future demand. Are the superstar investors willing to pay extra for that security of demand? You bet.

What are the Pebble Beach trademarks worth? Difficult to say. There is no one way to figure out the value of trademarks. One method compares the revenues of trademarked products with comparable, unbranded competing product. (Remember Bayer aspirin?) If comparable products exist, the premium can help establish the value of the mark. Another approach is to measure the royalty income — like the $75 million earned in baseball — derived from the company's licensing. Maybe, on the other hand, there was a good will valuation of a comparable business which was recently acquired. When the Pebble Beach Co. (PBC) was sold for $841 million in 1990, county assessors settled on a value for the physical property of $660 million.

(The negotiation was important to both the county and the company since the physical property is the only thing subject to yearly property taxes.)

Of the remaining $181 million, the lion's share could be described as the value of "intangibles" like the company's trademarks, its reputation and its "good will." So it is no wonder that the company aggressively defends its trademark rights against unauthorized use by others. That's a lot of money to lose by simply not being vigilant.

The PBC's vigorous enforcement of those rights is well-known and has sparked controversy. For example, PBC's enforcement of its "Pebble Beach" trademark has restricted local souvenir vendors. Trademark law, however, is leery of allowing exclusive rights to geographic names. The Pebble Beach Co. has also posted a sign near the Lone Cypress on 17-Mile Drive, warning off commercial photographers of its intellectual property rights to the images of this living tree. Finally, PBC won a suit in the Court of Appeal in 1998 against a company seeking to mimic its world-famous design to the 17th hole under a "trade dress" theory to protect golf course designs, one of the first such suits in the country.

What are the Pebble Beach trademarks worth? Maybe we'll soon find out.

Whitesides said.

"She's the hardest worker, but she also has the best sense of humor," she said. "And she has the loudest voice, except for mine."

Mari Wehde also gets in on the fun, though in her family of swimmers, Mari Wehde is the only one who's not "water-based," according to Kersten.

So she has worked as the CHS swim "Team Mom" for seven years. "I do it because it's an opportunity to be around the kids without them minding," she said. "They like it when they see me coming with food."

Her baked potatoes are the team favorite.

In the Fall Wehde will take her talent to UCSD, where her brother, Kent, also swims.

"I'm so thrilled. Everything coming up is so exciting!" Wehde said she'll study either political science or literature, her "true passion," at San Diego.

She hopes to compete in the junior and senior nationals, but thinks Olympic aspirations are far-fetched. "The Olympics have always been a dream, but that's so hard, and so competitive." She said she has to shave a second off her backstroke time to qualify for the nationals.

So she'll train hard all summer, to be ready for collegiate-level swimming. When she's not practicing, Wehde will lifeguard and teach swimming lessons. "This summer I'm just going to surround myself with water."

Maybe she is part fish, after all.

Subdivision committee OKs Pebble Beach plan

THE MONTEREY County Subdivision Committee unanimously approved the Pebble Beach company's plan for 316 home sites, a new golf course, a relocated equestrian center and 400 additional acres of open space in Del Monte Forest.

The June 10 vote clears the way for planning commission consideration of the project, which will also have to be approved by the Board of Supervisors and the California Coastal Commission.

The planning commission is scheduled to begin hearings on July 28.

The approval came as talks continued to transfer ownership of the world-famous golf course resort from Taiheiyō Club, Inc., to a partnership led by former baseball commissioner Peter Ueberroth, businessman Richard Ferris, golf legend Arnold Palmer and former Carmel Mayor Clint Eastwood.

Wehde also swims with Barracuda Aquatics, a year-round team made up of swimmers from various peninsula schools.

"So she does double practices, which sets a good work ethic for the girls," Whitesides said. "Kids are so into instant gratification, and swimming takes hours and hours and yards and yards."

Editorial

Sharing the burden

- Developers shouldn't expect taxpayers to subsidize their projects.
- When the public wants something, it should be willing to pay for it.

These are the complementary, common-sense principles that have grown out of the intense land-use battles of the last 30 years. The advocacy of property rights absolutists and the demands of environmental extremists have been tempered by the beliefs of the sensible majority of Americans whose respect for individual rights coexists with a desire for preservation of what's left of the pre-Colombian natural world.

Long gone are the days when a landowner could do what he pleased with his property. But, thanks to the U.S. Supreme Court, he has to be allowed to do something.

And, thanks to disproportionately high property taxes on new development and a plethora of permit conditions and mitigation fees, it can hardly be said that the average Monterey Peninsula homebuilder is mooching off the taxpayer.

But there are still some outstanding examples of the government loading the cost of a public-interest program solely on the backs of the few landowners who have the misfortune of seeking a permit after the program is put into effect.

Last month, for example, the staff of the California Coastal Commission put forth its ideas for protecting the Monterey pine from near-extinction because of the pitch canker fungus.

The epidemic that threatens the beloved Monterey pine is not a man-made phenomenon. But the tree is much more vulnerable because of the elimination of its habitat over the last 200 years by the thousands of people who have called the Monterey Peninsula home. All the tree-cutting, home-building and road-paving that's gone on, especially since 1900, has reduced the number of indigenous pines to a level where their very existence is threatened in a way that wouldn't be possible if man had left them alone. We are all responsible for the decline of the Monterey pine. Trees were cut down to make way even for the most sincere environmentalists among us.

But if a johnny-come-lately wants to cut one down now, the coastal commission has news for him. If the tree seems to be resistant to pitch canker, he'll have to pay for a "fail safe" program to ensure that its genetic characteristics are preserved, including: collecting seeds and tip-cuttings from the tree, creating something called a "clonal hedge" from those seeds and cuttings, and then transplanting the tree to a new location and caring for it until it is established.

We think this program is a superb idea — one that should have begun long ago.

But we do not think a few individual property owners should pay for it simply because they decided to cut down a tree or two after the coastal commission took note of the fact that many of the other trees were already gone.

The coastal commission staff's complex and costly plan for preserving the genetic characteristics of resistant trees should be imposed upon individual property owners only if it is accompanied by a government check — just a few cents from each of us — to pay for it.

Letter a pleasant surprise

Dear Editor:

What a pleasant surprise to pick up the June 4 Pine Cone and read the letter from the Klaputs regarding our Alzheimer's Association fundraiser!

It was a wonderful party and was well attended by friends and supporters of our chapter. All of the food and wine was donated, as well as items for sale and auction.

Special thanks to the committee of thirty who worked very hard to put on a successful event, as well as to Ted Leidig, Csaba Ajan, Tony Salameh and Ashley Edwards who fed all of us so well — and to the Carmel Pine Cone for being a sponsor.

We will realize a fine profit to invest in our programs and services for dementia patients and their caregivers. Thank you to all who supported our efforts.

Equestrian Center a bonus

Dear Editor:

Talk about sore losers! I was astonished to read the comments last week from some of the advocates for the current equestrian center in Pebble Beach that Judge O'Farrell's decision was "biased" and that the "Pebble Beach Company controls everything that happens in Monterey County."

Instead of whining about the loss of a free place to play polo on some of the country's most expensive real estate, these people should be glad that the Pebble Beach Co. is offering to build a new equestrian center — in a location that may not be quite as glamorous but which will be a major amenity nonetheless for the few people who use it.

BUDGET

grant," said councilwoman Barbara Livingston. "Tourism is alive and well in Carmel. I doubt very much that this year they will need our support."

"We need to study it carefully because they generate a huge amount of transient occupancy tax (TOT) and sales tax," said councilwoman Sue McCloud. "In a flat year, we want to be careful that whatever action we take doesn't adversely affect our revenues."

Carmel resident Jim Wright argued that the city should be more concerned with capital improvements than marketing. "It appears that the time is ripe to discontinue this funding," he said. "If the program is as worthwhile as we have heard, the business community should be willing to support it."

Keeping up with salaries

Representatives of the city's employee associations also attended the meetings and urged the council to finish negotiations with city workers before adopting the budget.

So far, the $9.6 million proposed budget does not include funding for salary increases during the next fiscal year. "Unfortunately, Carmel-by-the-Sea now has one of the lowest municipal salary plans on the Peninsula and is falling further behind the market each year," said Rose Marie Franzen, reading a prepared statement on behalf of the employees.

Councilwoman Paula Hazdovac agreed that the budget should consider salary increases. "We need to find a way to fix that little problem," Hazdovac said. "Saying that there's nothing in the budget doesn't send a very nice message."

"I'm nursing a cautious optimism for a possible increase," said councilman Marshall Hydorn, who serves on the city's personnel committee.

Resident Carla Ramsey asked the council to set aside money to "do something about the raccoon overpopulation and the destruction to our properties."

Ramsey and 250 other residents signed a petition asking the city to provide an animal control officer in town.

"We need somebody that we could call when we're disturbed and our homes are being destroyed in the middle of the night," Ramsey said.

Assistant City Administrator Greg D'Ambrosio said the city will take part in a joint powers agency with the county and other jurisdictions to bring county animal control officers into the city to patrol the streets on a regular basis.

The city has budgeted $7,000 for animal control services and $4,000 for start-up costs for a county facility. Those costs are substantially more than the $1,500 the city has been paying to county to provide on-call animal control services, according to D'Ambrosio.

New money?

Perhaps the most pressing matter before the council this year is the challenge to come up with $600,000 to $800,000 in new revenues. Kersnar has warned the council that unless the city finds more money, cuts will have to be made.

All council members were hopeful that a paid parking system would be an answer — at least in part — to the city's woes. A citizen's committee is currently studying that idea.

Mayor Ken White said he was "absolutely" opposed to cutting services. "I want to keep the services we have or improve them," White said. "We will have to look for increased income."

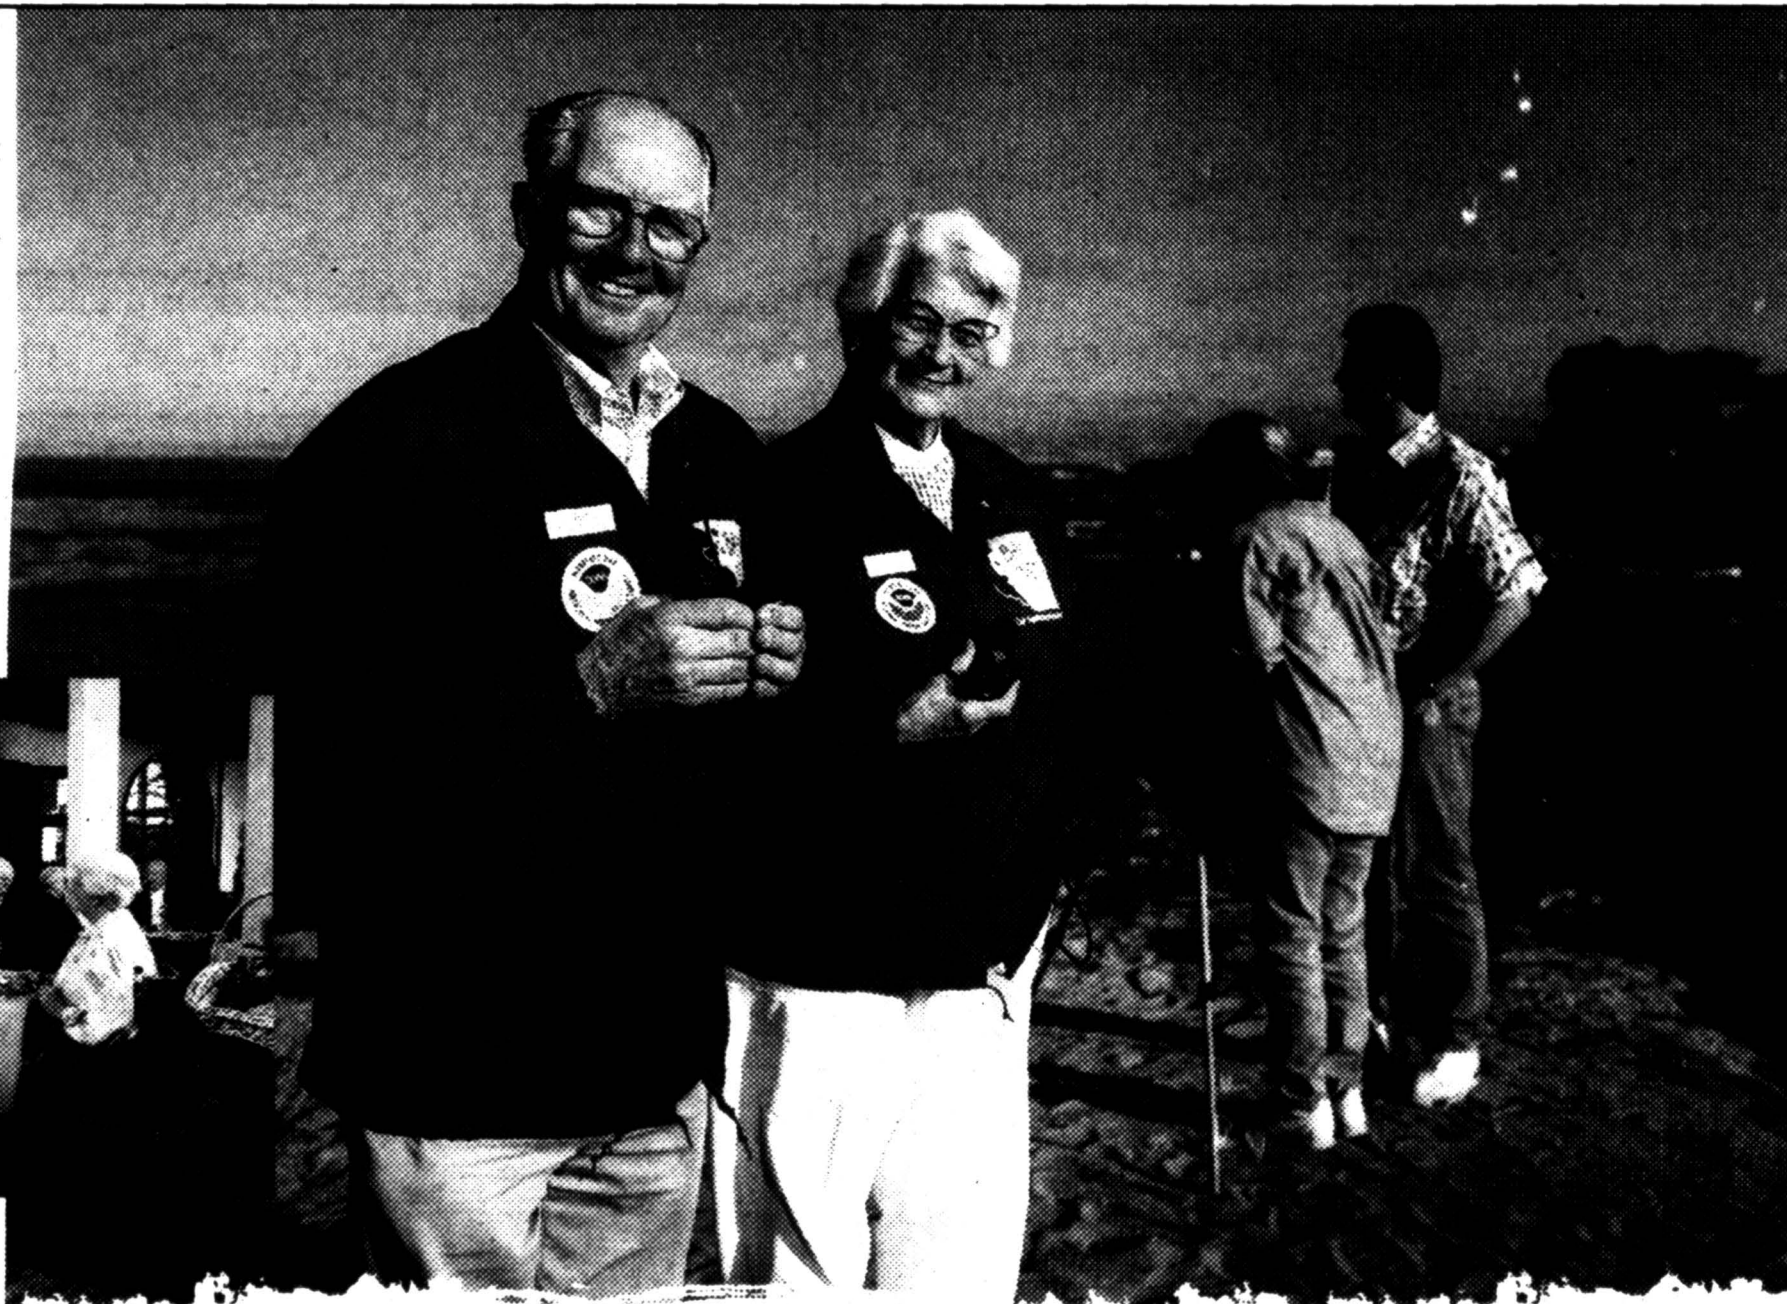

Hazdovac wondered if a combination of new funding — such as paid parking and an increase in TOT — might be the answer.

Interestingly enough, the city rescinded its half-percent increase in TOT amid controversy last year. Some residents were suspicious that the .5 percent increase — approved in 1995 by the city council at the same time the council approved the $100,000 CBA marketing program — was really a "special tax" that required a two-thirds majority of the voters.

Since then, California passed a new state law requiring even a "general tax" to be approved by a simple majority of the voters.

City officials projected that about $170,000 in yearly revenue was lost when the TOT was cut to 10 percent.

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

The death rate following heart bypass surgery is low for women as well as men. But a disturbing difference was found in a study of 344,000 people - 97,000 of them women - who had bypasses in 1994 through 1996. The death rate for women was 4.5 percent, but only 2.6 percent for men. Why the difference? Researchers are seeking answers. One clue: complicating diseases such as diabetes are more common among older women than men. Heart disease is the No. 1 killer of U.S. women, striking them an average of ten years later than men.

In the 1930s and 40s, boys of Philadelphia's outlying Rhawnhurst area played football and baseball in a loosely organized athletic association. The 40 or so players sometimes had to chase goats from the field where they played. After World War II, many moved away. Five years ago they set up an annual reunion. Men in their 70s come from as far as California to talk about the ballgames of boyhood days during the Depression, how they chipped in pennies and dimes to buy baseballs, and how they extended the life of a battered ball by wrapping tape around it. "We were poor but didn't know it," says one former player.

Remember when? 1945 - The Heisman Trophy went to West Point running back Doc Blanchard, called "Mr. Inside," for charging straight ahead. In 1946 the trophy went to teammate Glen Davis, "Mr. Outside."

ED WOODS' 'PLAN 9' SCREENED ON BEACH

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

HISTORY WILL be made this Saturday, June 12, when Films in the Forest moves to the 13th Avenue cove on Carmel Beach for a screening of Ed Wood Jr.'s sci-fi howlfest, "Plan 9 From Outer Space."

The show is free, starts at 8:30 p.m., and in keeping with the movie's theme, flying saucers will be given to all.

Frequently referred to as "The worst film of all time," "Plan 9" marks the last movie appearance by Bela (Dracula) Lugosi (he died during filming). Special effects are so ludicrous as to incite giggles. The cast also includes T.V. psychic Criswell, L.A. horror show hostess Vampira, ex-wrestler Tor Johnson and Joanna Lee, who went on to become a successful T.V. writer.

Don't look for a coherent script or brilliant acting. There isn't any. And it all goes gloriously downhill from there.

The "Ed Wood" movie biography made by Tim Burton and starring Johnny Depp boasted a budget several times the total that the real Ed Wood was able to spend in an entire career of movie-making. "Plan 9" (1958) is widely regarded as his signature effort.

Souvenir "Films in the Forest" sweatshirts, mugs, hats and T-shirts will be available for purchase on the beach.

This is the first of two Films in the Forest offerings that will be presented free of charge. On Saturday, Aug. 14, the adventure classic, "Treasure Island," starring Wallace Beery and Jackie Cooper, will be screened in Carmel's Devendorf Park.

The series continues throughout the summer at the Outdoor Forest Theater, Mountain View and Santa Rita, Carmel. Admission is $5 for adults, $3 for children 12 and under. The box office opens at 8 p.m. and there is a snack concession.

For info, call 626-1681 or 624-2522.

Dance 'Visions' to be realized in Carmel performance Saturday

"VISIONS: An Evening of Dance" will be presented by Dance Kids, Inc. at 8 p.m. Saturday, June 12 in Sunset Theater, San Carlos at Ninth, Carmel.

Choreographers Carol Benton Richmond and Gloria Elber present the children's classic "Peter and the Wolf" with narration by John Farmanesh-Boca. A contemporary ballet by choreographer Laura Akard explores the growth of a young woman in a three-part piece, "Laura Trilogy."

Set to music by Mandheim Steamroller, "Float" will be presented by former Omaha Ballet principal dancer Reed Scott.

For ticket information, call 624-3729.

THE BOOKSHELF

To build memory, remember to check out this manual

"The Memory Manual — 120 Simple Things You Can Do to Improve Your Memory After 50" by Betty Fielding. Trade paperback, 240 pages, $14.95, published by Quill Driver Books/Word Dancer Press, Inc. of Clovis.

THIS IS NOT one of those fun books that kids you along about failing memory with lots of amusing anecdotes. It gets right to the heart of the matter, and if you read this book from cover to cover, you'll probably improve your memory a great deal, because it gives you the tools to do just that. It's really a textbook, exploring memory in a comprehensive way, and there's a teacher's guide available from the publisher, as well.

Betty Fielding, who has spent 25 years of research and teaching in the field of aging — with particular emphasis during the past 10 years on memory — has taught and lectured extensively at such institutions of learning as U.C., Berkeley, John F. Kennedy University and Holy Names College.

Packaged pleasantly, easy-to-read and laid out attractively, the book has important points highlighted in bold face. There are short exercises at the end of each chapter for quick review.

As the populace is living longer today than in previous generations (did you know that the fastest-growing segment of the U.S. population today is people 85 and older?)

the concern haunts many that they will seem "old" to others who have better memories.

This is a serious book for dedicated people. If you can't find it at your favorite bookstore, it's available from the publisher by calling (800) 497-4909.

HERE'S A LOCAL success story: Debbie and Randy Reinstedt, owners of Ghost Town Publications here in Carmel, have sold their first million dollars worth of books. The publishing house, started in the early '70s, produced its first book — which, according to Randy, "was more of a booklet" — and sold it retail for $1.75.

By Margot Petit Nichols

As well as having written and published a number of books about the legends and lore of the Monterey Peninsula (some of them ghostly and scary), Randy has penned and produced a series of California history books for fourth graders which are used in schools throughout the state.

The legend books can be found in most local bookstores and are also selectively placed by Ghost Town Publications in quality outlet stores frequented by peninsula visitors. Congratulations to Debby and Randy for utilizing their talents so successfully.

MORE THAN 100 individuals, mostly seniors, took advantage of Harrison Memorial Library's free classes on Navigating the Internet. The library staff set up 10 computer stations at the Park Branch to accommodate students, and the staff gave individualized help during the 90-minute session. Classes were divided into three levels of instruction from beginning to advanced.

Next year, the Internet classes will be expanded to accommodate the response.

NATIONAL WRITERS UNION Local 7, as part of its reading series, presents Leah Halper and Tad Wojnicki tonight at 7:30, Friday, June 11 at the Thunderbird Bookstore, 3600 The Barnyard, Carmel. There will be a $5 admission to the reading, which will feature Halper bearing witness to her times through her writing. Growing up in the Central Valley and in Nicaragua, Halper became an activist while still in junior high school. She's worked in the women's movement and the international solidarity movement.

Wojnicki is the author of a short story collection, "Scrawls on a Crate of Oranges," a novel, "Lie Under the Fig Trees," and a work in progress, "Write Like a Lover," a workshop handbook which is updated with each new writers' conference he presents.

For information, call John Laue at 684-0854.

BILL DORRANCE, who wrote "True Horsemanship Through Feel" with Leslie Desmond, will be introduced by Buck Brannaman, if all goes as planned, at 6 p.m. Tuesday, June 15 at the Oak Deli, Carmel Valley Village at a Meet the Authors gathering scheduled through 8 p.m. Desmond will give a talk on the book. Call 659-3416 for information.

A repeat performance will be given on Friday, June 18 from 4 to 6:30 p.m. at the Frame Center at Mid-Valley Shopping Plaza, Carmel Valley Road. Call 624-6211 for information.

is a multi-talented musician. He plays acoustic bass, bamboo and silver flutes, composes, and teaches music. He is known throughout the world for his flute work on many film soundtracks and on bass, he has performed and recorded with Marian McPartland, Mose Allison, Mark Isham, Art Lande, and Dmitri Matheny. With multi-percussionist Ian Dogole and internationally known Eric Golub on violin and viola, these three musicians will put together a show of "global fusion music." Dogole is a recipient of a jazz Performance Fellowship from the National Endowment for the Arts, and Golub has been nominated twice by the Downbeat Critic's Poll in the Talent Deserving Wider Recognition category. By blending instruments and musical ideas from around the world, this trio is on the cutting edge world music, jazz and improvisation. The promises to be an enlightening and original evening of music you should not miss!

Pianist, composer and lyricist Dave Frishberg is a swinging, intelligent musician whose songs are highly entertaining and memorable. With a warm personality and a wry sense of humor, his best known songs include "My Attorney Bernie," and the very hip "Peel Me A Grape." Saxophonist herb Geller and his trio will be joining Frishberg. Geller has played with Shorty Rogers, Maynard Ferguson, Benny Goodman and numerous others in the U.S. and in Europe. Stylistically, Geller has been likened to Art Pepper or Bud Shank, so his cool style will add a great dimension to the music of David Frishberg.

Carolyn Samson and Norma Meyer catch up on news at the annual Carmel Public Library Foundation benefit.

Virginia Stone takes the opportunity to chat with Joan Didion and her mother Eduene Didion before the dinner began at Quail Lodge.

C.V. ROTARY SALUTES 100 BRILLIANT HIGH SCHOOL SCHOLARS

I AM continually baffled by the general assumption that members of the press lead singularly exciting lives. Friends seem to take it for granted that wherever I lead them is guaranteed to be memorable.

People and Places

By Sissi Maleki

I won't deny that in my earlier years I got into some unforgettable situations. Watching an autopsy was one, though some of you may disagree. Thrilling also was being the first press member at the Pentagon to view intelligence gathered in Nicaragua by spy planes when things were bubbling there.

But what about the time Paul Newman butchered me with the unique contempt he reserves for the press? That was NOT fun, his blue eyes notwithstanding. (You had to be there to know how truly uncomfortable that was.)

Anyway, just recently I thought of inviting my girlfriend to a function I'd cover for the paper. And I was inadvertently reminded of how privileged others view my press role.

My conversation with her went like this:

"What is it?" she asked.

"It's either a tour or a reception or something like that," I replied, absently.

"Where is it?"

"I'm not sure."

"Didn't they tell you?"

"Yeah, they did, but I can't remember."

"What should we wear?"

"I don't know."

At this point, I'm sure she doubted she would have been much more informed had she even asked, "Should we go naked?"

Despite such questionable circumstances, my friend was at my house, prompt like a soldier, waiting to go wherever I took her. And she sat by patiently as I went to one location, found it locked and wondered out loud where else the "whatever-it-was" could be.

Yup — she just knew in her heart of hearts that it'd be worth it eventually...

NEVER THOUGHT I'd get emotional looking at a bunch of super-smart kids. But that's exactly what happened on May 25 at Carmel Valley Rotary Club's annual dinner for the Top 100 students in the Carmel High School classes, held at Rancho Cañada.

Fresh-faced kids with their whole future before them got me thinking of the next millennium as each received certificates of recognition for superior academic achievements.

The two at my table, Erik Danielson and David Allen, were both seniors headed to UC San Diego to study engineering.

Valley Rotary member Pete Poitras was justifiably proud of the work the club puts in for its community, such as organizing this large dinner that honors parents, too.

A Carmel police detective by profession, Pete is particularly grateful to the club for giving him a chance to widen the scope of people he meets — crisis-free, non-delinquent people, that is...

"It's hard not to have a jaundiced eye," he explained. "Everyone lies to you as a cop — even the little old lady who insists she didn't run the stop sign!"

Rotary member Willard Hoot, "Bill" to his friends and a wee bit older than Pete, was actually one of the first real "JAG" (Judge Advocate General) officers of the Navy back in the 1950s. This followed a stint flying planes in the Pacific in WWII. What fascinating people we have around here.

As for me, I need to tell an old classmate of mine that I actually met a human being (Erik) whose favorite course is our old nemesis, calculus...

Tall ship Endeavour challenges women's wear

At a preview party on May 28, the Maritime Museum of Monterey gave guests an opportunity to take a tour of the tall ship "Endeavour," visiting our shores these days.

Obviously it was an exciting experience to see how old-time sailors lived. But what was really newsworthy was running into Velma Balestreri, who happened to be dressed to the nines — including high heels. Turns out hubby Ted had simply told her they were going to a cocktail party. When they pulled up near the ship, she turned to him in shock and squeaked, "We're going on a ship? Why didn't you tell me so I would have dressed differently?!"

His response confirmed without a doubt that he's a guy:

"I didn't think of it."

Joan Didion allows peek into her writer's mind

Writers are, for the most part, mysterious creatures to non-writers. And the opportunity to peek into a celebrated author's mind was the real prize of the evening at the Carmel Public Library Foundation dinner at Quail Lodge on June 1st.

Gene Zellner, a longtime fan, had brought along both wife Barbara and daughter Nori to attend the event and share his enthusiasm. Barbara Moore found Mary May Altenburg and Kathie Ritter make certain everything's under control at the annual Carmel Public Library Foundation benefit.

Didion's books very descriptive. "She just captures you," Barbara recalled.

Susan Draper decided to read one of Didion's books once she heard the writer was going to be the featured speaker. She discovered "the intrigue with the travel" to be a wonderful aspect of Didion's writing.

Dennis Mar had heard Joan Didion speak at Berkeley some years ago. He vividly recalled her tendency to use short fragments of sentences. This had led a fellow listener to wonder out loud, "Is this woman high on sunshine?"

Interior designer par excellence Michael Bolton was outrageous, as usual. He actually had the guts to go up to Joan Didion and tell her: "I consider you to be one of the two greatest exports from the Sacramento public school system." At which Joan asked, with a twinkle in her eye, "C.K. McClatchy?" (the name of the high school both attended). She obviously has a sense of humor.

Ginny Stone and Mary May Altenburg, co-chairs of the event, were the absolute grandes dames of the evening, and their style showed through in every detail of the benefit.

This was perfect for Joan Didion since it was her mother's birthday. And — it should be noted — it was her mother who told Joan as a child, "stop whining and start writing your thoughts down."

In the writer's talk that evening, particularly moving was her recollection of the period during which she thought she wasn't a gambler by nature. This lasted until she realized that "writers gamble daily by gambling on themselves." And, she admitted, they wonder each morning if "this day they won't be able to do it."

In a community which prides itself on its artistic endeavors, what this inspiring writer had to say resonated with everyone who possessed even a little bit of scribe soul.

■ Western spirit rules for Carmel Valley

Given the heart and soul of Carmel Valley residents, it is quite fitting that the Carmel Valley Historical Society sponsors an annual benefit featuring the cowboy/Western culture.

Held this year on June 5th at Hidden Valley, the evening began with the silent auction of a rich assortment of Western-style goodies. This was followed by a show of Western music and cowboy poetry.

Ellsworth Gregory, president of the CV Historical Society, mentioned that they've been working quite hard toward the goal of building a small headquarters for the society, along with the help of the Carmel Valley

Ed and Jan Mitchell chat with Dixie Dixon before the California Cowboy Show began.

Village Improvement Committee.

The determination to get a dose of cowboy music was most evident in the presence of Wendy K. Swanson, who came in spite of being on crutches. As hubby Doc Grant Swanson looked on with a twinkle in his eyes, Wendy sheepishly admitted she was "recovering from an active lifestyle."

Maryan Layton, who was raised in Carmel Valley, had brought along a non-native, Frank Mattos, to experience a bit of valley cowboy culture.

Another guest, June Campbell-Plumlee, was drawing people to her like honey draws bees. She was wearing the most incredibly fragrant lei that had been sent to her from Hawaii for her 80th birthday. You just couldn't walk by without noticing it. Very appropriate for someone who definitely does not look like 80.

"I don't feel like it, either," June added. So what's in a number, after all?

Ginza restaurant to rise again

MORGAN IS REALLY excited: The Ginza restaurant, which billed itself as "The most authentic Japanese restaurant in America," and which reigned supreme for around 30 years at 136 Olivier St., Monterey, will be opening again in the not too distant future!

Sale of the attractive property to The Inn at Heritage Harbor LLC will close in a week or two, according to buyers Tom and Janet David, and will be leased to a Japanese restaurateur who will do extensive improvements before opening. David is managing partner of the very handsome entity known as Heritage Harbor with offices at 99-100 Pacific St., around the corner from The Ginza.

By MORGAN

name only a few of his contributions to the community.

The Ginza featured such exotic cocktails as the "Sakini," a Japanese martini and the "Hara Kiri," a rum-based drink, so "suicidal" customers were limited to two. The Ginza was also famous for its sukiyaki and shabu shabu.

More information about the new restaurateur, chef and menu items very soon.

The Ginza was owned by K Nobusada, who died in April last year. As well as being remembered for his very popular restaurant and bar and as owner of Consolidated Factors — one of the largest fish processors and distributors of seafood and fruit in the world — Mr. Nobusada was active in Monterey business, music and philanthropic circles. He was one of the first Monterey businessmen to fund the Monterey Jazz Festival, was on its board of directors for years, and worked tirelessly on all causes for young people, to from the PG Safeway), need have no fear: The new owners, Jay Dib and Bill Karaki are under the watchful, caring eyes of former owners Paulo Kautz and Sylvia Medina who have built up a loyal following over the past nine years. Paulo and Sylvia are planning to stay on, working in tandem with Dib and Bill as long as it takes to assure they "get it down right."

Jay, formerly restaurant manager at the Monterey Plaza for five years, will be taking care of the front of the house, while Bill, who was with the Plaza, also, is the chef and will be working the line.

Jay told Morgan this week that they loved the restaurant so much as former customers, as proprietors they hope to be there still 10 years from now.

"The locals are supportive of us as new people and want us to succeed, for which we're very grateful. We've seen the same faces in the restaurant more than twice already in our short time here."

Sounds like a good portent to Morgan.

No changes in menu, hours or decor are planned for this excellent dinner house, but Taste will now be open seven days a week — on Mondays, too. Hours Sunday through Thursday are 5 to 9 p.m. and Friday and Saturday from 5 to 10 p.m. For information, call 655-0324.

OENOPHILICLY INCLINED but need to educate that wine palate? Monthly educational tasting programs with themes have been planned for the second Friday of every month at A Taste of Monterey Wine Center at 700 Cannery Row, above The Fish Hopper Restaurant. The center works closely with the Vintners and Growers Assoc. of Monterey Co., the not-for-profit wine marketing organization.

Proprietors Ken and Robin Rauh told Morgan that Dan Kleck of Kendall Jackson winery, Soledad, will be instructing tonight, June 11, on the bouquets of wines — the different aromas that the educated nose can detect.

Calendar of themes: July - Seriously chardonnay; Aug. - Red wine with fish; Sept. - The wine & food dating game;

Tastings start at 6 p.m. with more tasting and instruction from 6:30 to 7:30. Admission is $15, or $5 for members.

This is a fun thing for couples or friends to do together, and also a nice place to meet fellow oenophiles. For information and reservations, call 646-5446.

TERRY TEBLENTZKY of Michael's Catering, and his daughter Sofia will be doing free a father/daughter cooking demo at 1 p.m. Saturday, June 12 (the day before Father's Day) in The Cellar, at Macy's, Del Monte Center, Monterey. To RSVP, call (408) 243-3333, Ext. 4127.

HORN BLOWING TIME: In the April 23 à la carte, we devoted the whole column to films about food and restaurants. Now we find, in the May issue of the trade magazine, Restaurants USA, a whole column devoted to films about food and restaurants! All the flicks we discussed in à la carte are mentioned — but we must admit, Restaurant USA surpassed us with two movies: "The Age of Innocence," (1993) and "Soul Food," (1997), neither of which we've seen — yet.

THE CONSENSUS of readers' response to Morgan's query (If you experience bad service in local restaurants, do you tell the manager, or just keep mum?) was definitely to tell the manager. As one reader asked rhetorically, "How else are they going to know?"

SHERRY GLASER STARS IN 'OH MY GODDESS'

RETURNING TO her local performance home is Sherry Glaser in a one-woman show, "Oh My Goddess."

In "Oh My Goddess," Glaser plays both Miguel De Cervantes, a waiter whose spiritual awakening comes via a call to a psychic phone network; and Ma, a combination Earth Mother, Jewish Mother and co-creator of the universe whom "Miguel" is chosen to channel.

Glaser's one-woman show follows the spiritual epiphany of Miguel through high colonics, confrontations of Biblical proportions and destiny itself to find himself the unlikely channeler for the return of the great goddess, Ma.

"Oh My Goddess" plays at 8 p.m. Fridays and Saturdays and 5 p.m. Sundays through July 24th in The Carl Cherry Center for the Arts, located at the corners of Fourth and Guadalupe, Carmel. Tickets are $15. For reservations, call 626-0666.

Kiwanis stage Spring Fest

THE CARMEL-by-the-Sea Kiwanis and City of Carmel co-host Spring Fest '99 from 11:30 a.m. to 6:30 p.m. Saturday, June 12. Setting is Devendorf Park, Ocean at Junipero, Carmel, and if you've ever wanted to smack a public official with a water balloon, here is your chance.

The party will also feature live music, luncheon and dinner barbecue and activities for the family. Info: 625-1553.

MAX is a certifiable nut. With his cockatoo mane of white hair, his shorts and chest bared in any weather, and his energetic face, he belies his 80 years. He came 40-some years ago from Munich, taught our mountain troops how to ski, yodels at the slightest provocation. At first he was a gardener; still is, clipping flowers from various private gardens and presenting them with cavalier flourishes to wealthy widows on Carmel Point. Once he married one of them and still carries on a daily caretaker relationship with her, despite the fact they've been divorced for 20 years. MAX conducts impromptu tours for walking visitors, draping an arm affectionately around the ladies' shoulders, bantering the while with their somewhat startled companions. He owns partial shares of several downtown restaurants, carries his stock certificates in paper bags in the back for his Volkswagen. He sweeps the streets, distributes garbage equally from can to can in his neighborhood, believes that everyone is entitled to share in assets like tools, firewood and flowers. His base is Carmel Point, where he is loved by some and hated by others. Look for him anywhere in Carmel.

THE HEART OF CARMEL POINT

IF WALLS COULD SPEAK, much of Carmel's history could be learned from this spacious English cottage. Built around 1920, this one-of-kind home on 8 lots is the style of architecture Carmelites have tried to emulate for the past 80 years! With walls of stout local stone and in the Craftsman mode, the home was sited on what must have been the most prime lots on Carmel Point (after all the early owners had all of Carmel Point to choose from). This 5 bedroom, 4.5 bath home has been wonderfully restored, remodeled and adapted for modern living. The kitchen is state-of-the-art, the baths are up to date, the master suite w/office dressing room & sleeping porch is spacious and understated. The gardens are a timeless treasure of edible plants, herbs, fountains, lawns, and patios set behind a private fence. If you close your eyes you can almost hear Jack London, Mary Austin, & Robinson Jeffers playing Abalone League baseball on the Carmel Point Diamond just down the street! Though time has marched on, it has also stood still behind these garden walls where the feeling of old Carmel has been retained and restored. $3,295,000. Tim Allen & Greg Linder, (831) 626-2221.

NOBLE FRENCH ESTATE IN PEBBLE BEACH

ENJOY A GRACIOUS LIFESTYLE in this stately French mansion in the estate area of Pebble Beach! On a classic and quiet, sunny lane a short drive from the Lodge sits this gracious chateau-style Pebble Beach residence. The 4800+ square feet of elegant living space features four bedrooms and four baths, a graceful formal living room, a spacious but intimate dining room, an oversized family room and adjoining library, large master suite with cathedral ceilings and luxuriant master bath. The immense kitchen is a gourmet's dream complete with a breakfast area, the generous fourth bedroom and bath is a separate guest apartment, a security gate leads to the three-car garage or take the circular drive right to the front door! The grounds are fully landscaped with lawns and mature specimens and there is even a lifesized children's playhouse much like a Carmel cottage in the back gardens. This is a wonderful opportunity to own a well-maintained and elegant residence in the much sought-after estate area of Pebble Beach. $2,595,000. Tim Allen & Greg Linder, (831) 626-2221.

County wants 'consistent standards' for P.B. plan

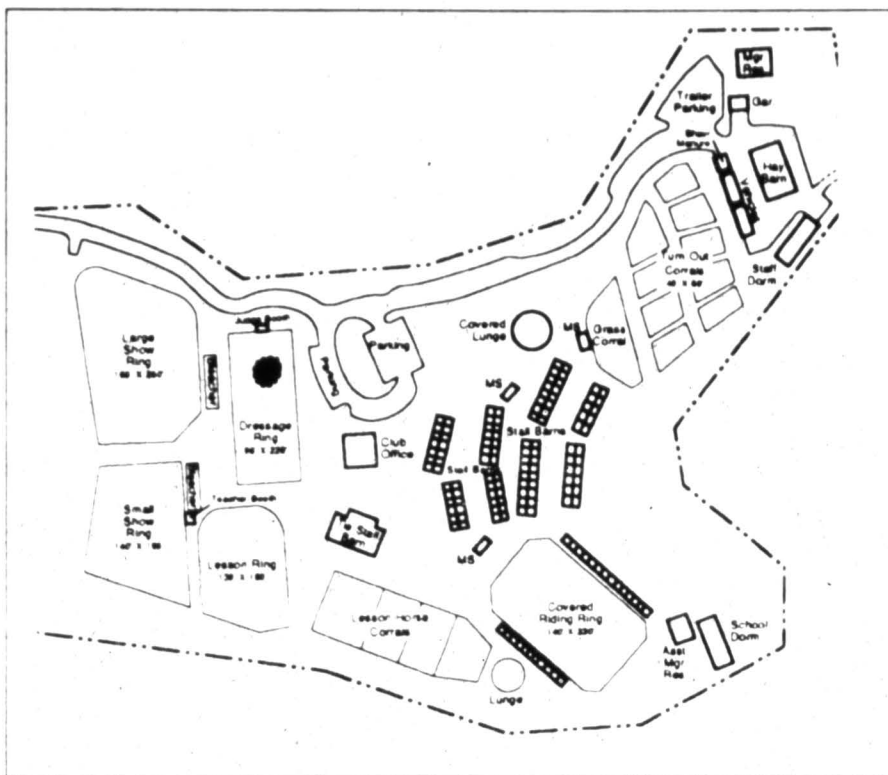

By PAUL MILLER

MONTEREY COUNTY planners rode to the rescue of the Pebble Beach Company this week with a detailed rebuttal to the California Coastal Commission's criticism of the company's development plans.

The Pebble Beach plan — comprising 316 home sites, a new golf course and a relocated equestrian center — has been in the works for more than 10 years, company officials say.

Detailed work on it began after the Del Monte Forest Land Use Plan — which allowed up to 889 new homes in the exclusive neighborhood — was approved by the California Coastal Commission in 1984.

A massive environmental impact report that looked at the impacts of the proposal was circulated to the public in 1994.

Among the key elements in the Pebble Beach Company's plans for Del Monte Forest is this $5 million Equestrian Center, which would be built near Highway 68. The existing horse facility would be replaced with a new golf course.

But planners for the coastal commission got their first detailed look at the P.B. Co.'s proposal during a March field trip and they didn't like some of what they saw.

After the field trip, coastal commission deputy director Tami Grove informed the county that it could no longer use the 1984 LUP as the yardstick for measuring the Pebble Beach plan because "much has changed" since 1984.

In particular, the LUP's list of endangered species is no longer adequate, Grove said in a May 19 letter.

"Since 1984, new sensitive species have been discovered. . . other species have become more endangered and given new listing status . . . and yet others are threatened in ways not imagined in 1984," Grove wrote.

According to the coastal commission the Pebble Beach plan will have to be modified to protect these newly threatened or endangered species, which include Yaden's Piperia and the Monterey pine.

But last week Monterey County Planning and Building Director William L. Phillips said that the county is legally required to follow the LUP.

"It is important for the county to apply development standards consistently during project review allowing for some certainty of outcome based on those standards in effect when an application is filed, while allowing for flexibility to address new issues as they arise," Phillips said.

In fact, Phillips said, the commission's staff insisted that a complete list of endangered species present in the Del Monte Forest be attached to the LUP at the time it was certified.

In order to add species to the list, he said, "a land use plan amendment would need to be processed and the added species would only apply to development applications made on or after the date the amendment was approved."

Furthermore, Phillips said, the P.B. Co. and the county have modified the development plan to protect all endangered and threatened species in Del Monte Forest, including the Monterey Pine.

"Monterey County is acutely aware of the threats of pine pitch canker and other diseases to the Monterey pine forest."

he said.

He pointed out the the P.B. Co.'s plan includes preservation of large, heavily forested areas, including Pescadero Canyon and Huckleberry Hill. The county "maintains that the best approach to ensuring long-term viability of the pine forest" is to set aside such large tracts of the forest, according to Phillips.

But the coastal commission — believing that 85 to 90 percent of Monterey pines will eventually succumb to the fungal disease — also wants property owners to be required to protect individual trees which are seemingly resistant to pitch canker.

"When the possibility of extinction exists, the county must demonstrate that the environmental sensitivity of Monterey pine in the Del Monte Forest has been thoroughly analyzed in a manner befitting its importance to the species as a whole," Grove said.

In a staff report on another Pebble Beach project — expansion of the driving range near the Peter Hay course — the coastal commission recommended a broad new program of permit conditions designed to protect the Monterey pine, including the following "fail safe" steps to preserve the genetic characteristics of trees which are to be removed for development but which seem to resist the ravages of pitch canker:

- collection of several seed-bearing cones from each tree, followed by "archiving and preservation" of the cones at a facility approved by the government;

- collection and cultivation of "tip cuttings" from each tree;

- use of these disease-resistant seeds and cuttings to "propagate disease resistant/tolerant clonal hedges";

- following collection of seeds and cuttings, transplanting of each seemingly resistant tree to a suitable site, followed by a "reasonable on-going effort" to ensure that it is successfully established at its new location.

Lee Jeffers
and her
Tor House kitchen

STORY and PHOTOS by MARGOT PETIT NICHOLS

BUNDLES of dried verbena hang inverted from the kitchen rafters; pots of young herbs are placed by planter boxes in the patio, ready for planting in the newly turned soil: wild onion and spinach plants and ever-spreading mint vie for cottage garden space with genteel Icelandic poppies and patrician old fashioned roses — all visible to Lee Jeffers from her Tor House kitchen in Carmel.

Lee Jeffers has been holding forth in the Tor House kitchen for 50-some years, since her mother-in-law, Una Jeffers, taught her to cook there when Lee was a bride of just 20. Newly married to Donnan Jeffers, one of Una and Robinson Jeffers' twin sons, the Michigan-raised and educated Leota Merchant Waggener came to live at Tor House in the mid-1940s.

She was welcomed by her world-famous poet father-in-law, Robinson

Jeffers, at a time when her mother-in-law, Una Jeffers, was debilitated with illness and when Donnan wanted to help care for his mother. Platinum-haired, pre-med student Lee learned to cook and helped take over kitchen duties.

Una's instruction to Lee in culinary matters saw them all through many years of family togetherness at Tor House. In Edith Greenan's recently republished 1939 reminiscence of her best friend ("Of Una Jeffers — A Memoir"), she speaks of the food Una prepared in the early years of marriage to Robinson — before they had built Tor House — as being substantial and simple with Una having selected and purchased all ingredients with thoughtful care. These domestic skills were passed on to Lee.

When Lee and Donnan moved in, the Tor House kitchen was situated off the living room in what is now the "book room," a small, charming chamber with a view of the garden. Because there was no electricity in the house until later, the kitchen space was fitted out with a two-plate kerosene cooking range and a portable "tin box" that fit over the burners, transforming it into an oven for baking. The two-plate range, an early gift from Greenan, when converted into the make-shift oven, was used by Lee and Una for baking many a "sort-of cheese soufflé" from a recipe devised by Una.

The 'Sort-of Cheese Soufflé'

Lee Jeffers told The Pine Cone:

"This was more of a casserole dish, but we called it a cheese soufflé. We would make a really good cheese sauce, using various leftover cheeses, and perhaps a cheddar, a little flour, butter, and other things, and put it in a casserole. Then we would break fresh eggs into it whole and bake it until the eggs had been baked through. Everyone loved it."

Years later, when Lee, Donnan and their children went to live in Ireland for a few years, Lee made a hit with her Irish friends by serving, then teaching them to make the casserole that masqueraded as a soufflé.

A sink, a larder and a small pantry comprised the rest of the kitchen, and dinner was taken in the living room on lap trays or at a gate-legged table that is now in the present-day kitchen.

Lee's cookbook collection includes a number of Una's favorites: "Sunday Suppers" by Lacy Buck's grandmother, Alice Laidlaw Williams; "Chafing Dish Possibilities . . ." by Fannie Merritt Farmer; a much-used antique copy of "The Joy of Cooking," as well as one of Lee's favorites, "Six Minute Soufflés."

A particular preference from "Sunday Suppers" was a menu calling for sardines on toast (see below). The little book is inscribed by the author: "To Una and Robin — with prayers for a gentle judgment, from Alice."

Recipe books used by Una and Lee Jeffers include a menu planner by Alice Laidlaw Williams, "Sunday Suppers," one page of which is shown below left in detail.

Tor House was always a work of art in progress, and when it was decided a proper-size kitchen was needed and when electricity had been installed, the garage — a narrow room with rafted ceiling — was converted into the present-day Tor House kitchen and breakfast room, a room of such charm and grace it is a wonder all cottage kitchens everywhere aren't patterned after it.

The kitchen is fitted out with a modern Kenmore range and oven, a homey brick fireplace, a freestanding handsome china cabinet and an Early American settle.

Inset hand-made tiles of herbs are mounted over the sink, dozens of baskets hang from on high and Una's pewter pieces mingle with Lee's. Una and Robinson's trip to Taos, New Mexico, is recalled by a wooden spice cupboard placed near the cookbook rack; a utensil holder made by Lee and Donnan's son-in-law Dieter utilizes a wooden headboard from an old single bed; hanging pots and pans lend a utilitarian as well as artistic air — but of especial note is the gracious gateleg table that was once the dining table in Tor House's living room.

The table is positioned to the right of the fireplace and in front of French doors leading into the cottage garden where Una and Lee used to grow kitchen herbs.

Granted, the "new" kitchen is small — so small, in fact, that a room in back of it had to be added later through two-foot thick walls of boulders held in place by sheer weight and chinked with mortar

An artful tangle of verberna and roses highlights the Tor House garden.

A freestanding china cabinet and an Early American settle display Lee Jeffers' china and a collection of pewter that mingles Una and Lee's "finds."

— but it contains a large refrigerator, counter space, storage cupboards and open shelves with cooking crockery.

The kitchen is off-limits during the Friday and Saturday Tor House docent tours, conducted by appointment only. It is part of Lee Jeffers' adjoining "apartment," a compendium of seven-some rooms on different levels that look out onto a hidden patio. Lee's present-day herb garden, wicker summer chairs and table and a storage room that was once the commodious dog house for the Jeffers' series of much-loved bulldogs.

One of Lee's three sitting rooms — the one at ground level that looks out onto the patio — was at one time the playroom for Lee and Donnan's four children — Lindsey, Robin, Donnan and Una.

Her other rooms are upstairs: an office where she handles Jeffers' literary properties; sitting rooms and bedroom where she reads her favorite genre of literature — mysteries — and where she looks out on Hawk Tower and the the gardens below made bright with flowers swaying in sea breezes — and the vast Pacific Ocean.

Crash of surf on shore mingles with cries of seagulls riding currents of air, then wheeling and circling over Tor House bluffs luxuriant with native plants, flowers and sea grasses. Surely there can be no place more splendid than this.

Although electricity came late to Tor House, central heating was never installed, and so Lee, in one of the pursuits that delights her most — browsing through antique shops — came upon venerable, small mantelpieces to frame the personal fireplaces in each of the apartment rooms. The kitchen fireplace is the one exception.

The handsome brick fireplace that reaches to the kitchen rafters has only a narrow shelf as a mantel. It was designed and bricked by Donnan, Lee's husband, who fashioned a shallow mantel of sorts by inserting a row of bricks that jut forward, forming a resting place for candelabra and other brass pieces. Higher up, he artfully inserted a small niche that houses a pre-Columbian figure. Beneath the shelf, brass utensils hang on either side of the fireplace.

Lee's husband, Donnan Jeffers, constructed the kitchen fireplace with its shallow mantel on which old brass objects are displayed

Retrofitting the garage into a kitchen was a family affair. Lee's father designed the gracefully mullioned French doors and sidelights that replaced more prosaic garage doors, and lead to the Tor House gardens.

It was Lee who laid the kitchen floor tiles of terra cotta pieces picked up for a song from leftovers when Sunset school was being retiled. Her father, coming upon Lee on her hands and knees press-

Striking scenes are available from almost every room in this 3 or 4 bedroom, 3 bath residence as well as from its wraparound view deck. Southern-exposure master suite has huge walk-in closet. Northern wing has large, separate family room or study with vaulted ceiling and adobe fireplace. Vaulted beam ceilings also grace the large kitchen, formal dining room, and living room with second fireplace. The spacious 3,166 sq. ft. home has an additional 2845 sq. ft. lower level for storage rooms, ocean-view work space, a perfect room for a wine cellar & unfurnished space. A private drive leads up the lush, Monterey pine and cypress forested grounds to gardens, patio areas and a hillside view terrace on this one-acre Carmel Highlands property. $1,500,000.

Old-World Charm in Pebble Beach

Owner-designed electric wrought-iron security gates open onto the artfully landscaped grounds of this Monterey Colonial with Mediterranean old-world charm. The original owner-artist built a north-facing two story French picture window that sets the stage for the dramatic Great Room in this immaculate home. The large tiled Conservatory, Great Room, and Kitchen all open onto the spacious & sunny south facing central patio, surrounded by French doors and rambling flower gardens. A separate two story cottage has one bedroom, one bath and kitchen overlooking the grounds. $1,475,000.

Private Oasis

World-class design features and materials create an oasis in this exquisite 5,000 sq. ft. private gated Mediterranean estate. Massive but graceful archways frame the expansive living area which includes 20' vaulted ceiling, custom carved double entry doors, tiled floors with radiant heat & an impressive limestone mantle over the deep-set wood burning fireplace. Thick interior walls afford numerous recessed areas for art pieces and other treasures. Wet bar and wine closet off the formal dining room provide for elegant entertaining. Ten sets of custom French doors lead to the central architectural pool, tiled spa, and extensive grounds. $1,350,000.

Where The Sun Begins

Only three miles into Carmel Valley, this five bedroom, five bath custom home sits on a spacious property with plenty of parking and a high-producing sweet water well. The large, multi-use historic barn could house antiques, collector cars, etc. Three large Carmel stone or brick fireplaces add warmth, while skylights and huge windows provide great light and views. Master suite has its own floor-to-ceiling fireplace, two bathrooms, a separate kitchen, huge private deck, and space outside for a private lap pool. $1,300,000.

Ocean-View Carmel Villa

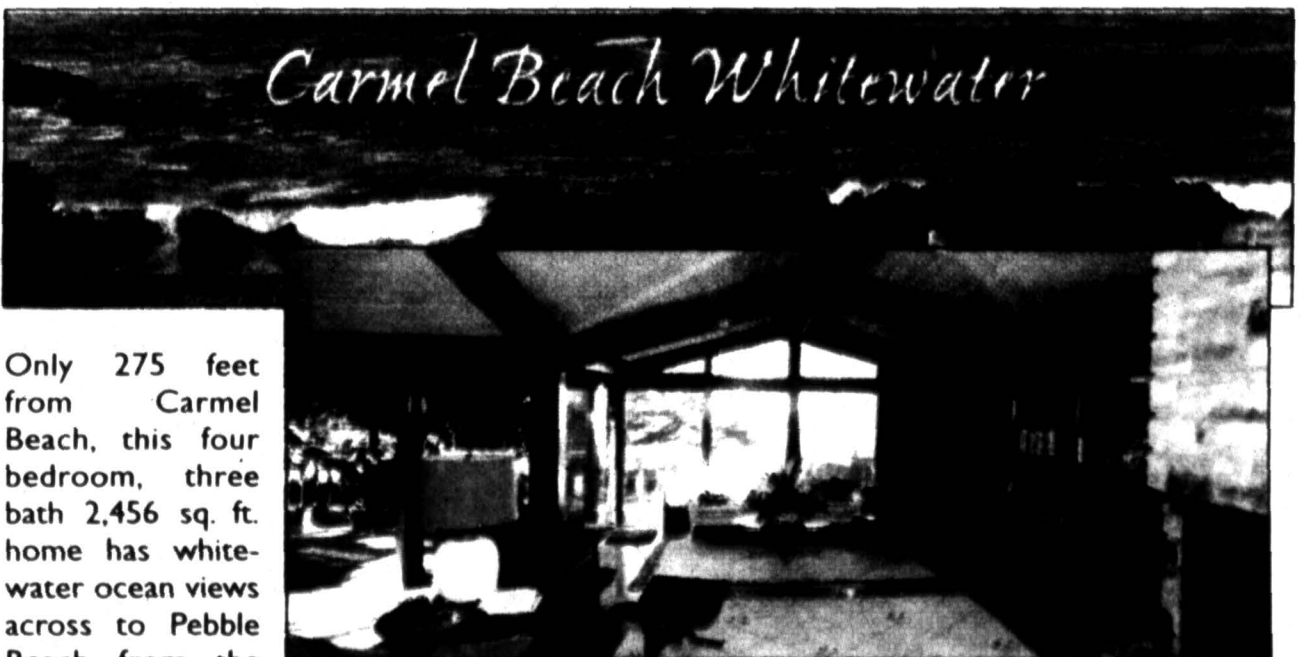

This very private 6,315 sq. ft. corporate or family compound is elevated above the road and has extensive off-street parking. Four spacious guest suites create private retreats as offices, art studios, exercise rooms, etc. Wraparound 'Great Room' has hardwood floors, wetbar, two large stone fireplaces, and French doors opening onto a large deck. Another set of French doors leads from the formal dining room onto a spacious outdoor entertaining area, with outside wetbar & separate spa area. Ocean-view master suite has its own private deck. $1,300,000.

Monterey's Sunbelt

Secluded, convenient location at the end of a cul-de-sac near Old Del Monte Golf Course in the sunbelt of Monterey. This 3 bedroom, 2.5 bath retreat has formal entry, open beam vaulted ceilings, hardwood floors, separate family room, sumptuous bay window breakfast nook, and a spacious laundry room. Large windows, skylights & French doors provide natural light and open onto a very private sanctuary. Great outdoor and indoor living with large patio, expansive sundeck, large front & backyard, 2-car garage and 2-car carport. $795,000

Carmel Beach Whitewater

Only 275 feet from Carmel Beach, this four bedroom, three bath 2,456 sq. ft. home has white-water ocean views across to Pebble Beach from the house as well as its large view deck. The expansive residence has 111' width paralleling the ocean, plus 91 ft. of street frontage. Walls of glass provide great light as well as views, complemented by the warmth of hardwood floors and a floor-to-ceiling Carmel stone fireplace. Very private setting includes extensive outdoor areas behind Carmel stone walls and gates. Two-car garage. $2,950,000.

ing the rectangles of rich terra cotta tiles into place using a carpenter's level, was puzzled.

"Can you see the bubble?" he inquired of his daughter. "What bubble?" Lee responded, not knowing the level was rightfully named for its purpose, and not merely a mortar smoother.

The herbs that Lee has used in cooking, which she replenishes each spring in the patio planter boxes, hold an artistic attraction to her, too: When the kitchen was being created, she fashioned tiles to embed over the kitchen sink — tiles she painted with freehand sketches of garden herbs and which were fired in the Sunset Center kiln.

Although the Tor House kitchen has seen a lot of cooking in its day, Lee admits she eats so little these days that it isn't used as zealously as in the past. Lee says she eats mostly fresh vegetables, which she cooks with the garden herbs, and although "not a big sweet eater" by her own account, friends who have enjoyed her cooking in the recent past say Lee turns out delicious stuffed apples, cobblers and lemon curd of which even such a fastidious cook as Una would have been proud.

Formerly a narrow garage, the present kitchen came into existence when electricity was installed by Robinson Jeffers, who proved again that form follows function in the deep-reveal kitchen window inset to the left.

PAST IS PRESENT IN MARY SHAW'S PEBBLE BEACH HOME

DRIVING THROUGH Pebble Beach, you might think the pickup truck is the vehicle of choice, but that's not quite the case. The trucks belong to contractors and sub-contractors involved in a frenzy of remodeling probably unequalled in this century. What is even more remarkable, the homes under re-construction were once thought quite adequate. In fact, more than adequate. Plumbers, plasterers, painters, electricians. The action on the forest's labyrinth of narrow roads is reminiscent of an ant farm you might have had as a kid.

Which is why it's such a pleasant change of pace to walk into Mary Morse Shaw's peaceful walled garden.

and even more pleasant to sink into one of the twin sofas in her serene, high-ceilinged living room.

The house, designed by Mary's late husband Will Shaw, was built in 1984, and is less than a mile from The Lodge at Pebble Beach, as well as the Beach and Tennis Club where Mary still plays tennis regularly.

Casa Palmero, soon to be a world-class spa at Pebble Beach, was once Mary Shaw's home.

It's easy to understand why these surroundings feel like home. They were home to Mary when she was growing up as the daughter of Samuel F. B. Morse, the man who bought the fabled Del Monte Forest in 1919 and, with the eye of a conservationist, proceeded to develop it.

Sam, as he was affectionately known to many on the Monterey Peninsula, built his own house near what is now the 18th hole at Pebble. It's said he first fell in love with the area when he picnicked in 1908 at virtually that same spot.

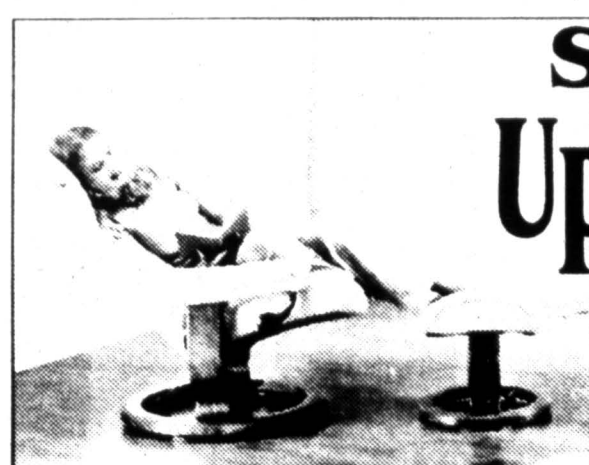

The development of the forest might have taken a far different turn had Morse not had the foresight to protect the beachfront from rampant construction. The land he sold to others bore strict covenants for its use.

He also built roads around trees and saw the construction of golf courses as further green-belt preservation.

According to local records, Morse's Del Monte Company fell on hard times during the Great Depression. The rustic guest lodge he had built overlooking the ocean was virtually empty of visitors. Morse and his family moved into the lodge and rented out their house next door.

ness entity in the forest (where the Inn at Spanish Bay now stands), and the sale of his Monterey County Water Works, kept the company from going under.

During this very rough period, Morse cut salaries and wages, but refused to skimp on the quality of his accommodations. Ever the entrepreneur and P. R. man, he took a color film of the area to a travel agents' convention in New York. Soon things were humming once again.

The kids

The vagaries of business were probably of little interest to Sam's kids. They lived in one of the world's most glorious spots and, says Mary, they also had the fun of running around the old Del Monte Hotel (now the Naval Postgraduate School), which their dad managed. If there were disadvantages to being Sam's daughter, she can't think of any.

Mary grew up and became the wife of Richard Osborne, the first president of what had then become Pebble Beach Properties. They moved into another unique house, the Casa Palmero, next door to the lodge.

(It should be noted that the correct Spanish is Palmera, with an "a." However, the Pebble Beach Company is sticking with an "o," perhaps for historical reasons, as it prepares to open The Casa Palmero as a world-class spa this summer. Such bad Spanish is common in California where developers, in search of ever more romantic names, often fractured the language.)

The Casa, built in the 1920s, is a classic example of Mediterranean architecture — pastel stucco, a red tile roof and a central garden or (in Spanish), the patio.

"The original idea," says Mrs. Shaw, was for all the houses in the forest to be built in that style, but with the Depression, "you took anything you could get."

The blonde and elegant Mrs. Osborne did "a lot of company entertaining" in the Casa while raising four children.

"We were very social. It was a time when Pebble Beach was a much smaller community and," she says, "everyone knew each other."

Fast forward

Fast forward to 1967 and a second marriage. Mary is now Mrs. Will Shaw, wife of a local architect who, it appears from old newspaper clips, was as interested in preserving the natural beauty of the area as was Mary's father.

At one time the president of the Monterey Bay Chapter of the American Institute of Architects, he observed that autos were less attractive than trees, and was no doubt instrumental in inspiring many of the underground parking garages of latter-day Carmel.

Later in his career he earned accolades from the AIA for the handsome renovation of Highlands Inn. The Inn's earlier incarnation was, like Sam Morse's first lodge, very woodsy and rather dark.

It was also heavy on Scottish plaid.

Mr. and Mrs. Shaw lived for a time in a lovely old Monterey adobe just off Jefferson Street. "It was small, but it had a nice big living room," she says.

Small?

"Small" is not a word one associates with the residence Will Shaw built for her in 1984, the one in which she lives today. Walking in the front door, it is the visitor who feels small.

The ceiling soars to a height of 20 feet, as do the windows. Light floods in from the garden. The entry hall, not a "hall" at all, invites exploration in all directions.

To the left, the kitchen, dining room and what might be called the "family area." To the right, the master bedroom/sitting room. Directly ahead, the dramatic living room.

Each space flows seamlessly into the other, and each has access to the outdoors where the high-walled garden entirely surrounds the house and provides total privacy.

Art and artifacts highlight the gra-

Colorful original canvases grace the white walls of Mary Shaw's Lisbon Lane home.

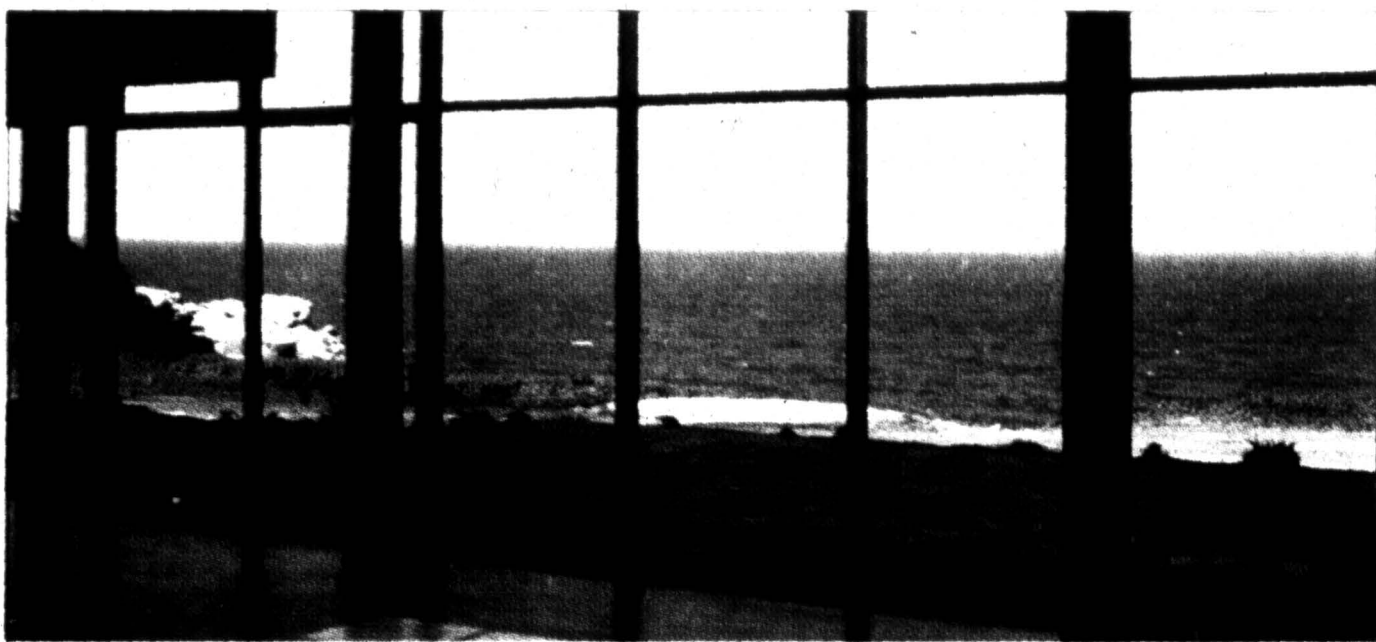

The master bedroom is all about tranquility. Again, the garden, seen through sliding glass doors, becomes part of the interior. Decor is minimal: the eye is drawn to the far wall and a large Francis McComas seascape in which the artist appears to have tamed the surf.

The sitting area of the bedroom, with its cozy corner fireplace and Spanish-style furniture seems a nostalgic gesture to the Shaws' earlier home, the old Monterey adobe.

The second bedroom with its private bath is located on a high loft off the entry. From this aerie one can look down into the entertainment area. (It suggests the perfect site for a child's viewing of a grown-up party below.)

Lost in space?

Somewhat surprising in a house of 4,300 square feet, there is no third bedroom. And no, Mrs. Shaw, widowed in 1997, does not feel lost in all that space.

Mary Shaw, (right) enjoys bridge with friends under a chandelier dating back to the original Lodge at Pebble Beach. Her dog Sandy stands guard.

IN YOUR DREAMS

Dramatic angles and a soaring roofline were hallmarks of architect Will Shaw.

She enjoys it. Ironically, however, she spends a great deal of time in what was originally designed as a "maid's room" off the kitchen. It is now "the computer room."

(Not one to let grass grow under her feet, Mrs. Shaw prefers to communicate by e-mail and, according to family members, will often let the answering machine take her telephone calls.)

The kitchen itself is spare and functional. "a man's kitchen," one might think. The lady of the house notes, with just a hint of "wouldn't you know!" that the oven door, when open, impedes foot traffic.

(Well, as we're all aware, there is no "perfect" house.)

The dining area is also modest by standards of today's multi-million dollar Pebble Beach renovations, but it's warm — almost cozy.

The issue of "only-two-bedrooms" and what to do with visitors, is addressed by a lovely little guest house in a corner of the spacious front courtyard.

Designed in the same steep angular style as the main house, it melds neatly into the overall landscape.

Content?

It seems clear that Mary Morse Shaw might be content to live out her days in this house that is special to her in so many ways. But that would be contrary to the nature of Mary Morse Shaw.

Last fall, ground was broken for her new home in the Macomber Estates area of Pebble Beach.

"Since my daughter, Polly Osborne, is also an architect, I thought I might as well give her a chance to build a house for me."

"And that," says daughter Polly, "is another story."

'Talk about your marine influence,' observes Steve Beck, garden manager of the cultivated grounds at Esalen Institute, south of Big Sur. Beck will lead a tour of the gardens on Saturday, June 26, during a first-ever event that will benefit the Big Sur Arts Initiative.

Big Sur Gardens to make kids' lives bloom

STORY by ANNE PAPINEAU

A mystery-shrouded, magical place, Big Sur reveals itself selectively. There is its public face: the inns, restaurants, galleries and markets that dot Highway 1. Upon Nature's whim, even these areas become off-limits to outsiders, as when El Niño spawned a series of storms in February, 1998, that slashed the linking thread of Highway 1.

The storm-born isolation, curiously enough, inspired a group that will open rarely shown portions of Big Sur to the public. For the first time, many of Big Sur's "private faces," exquisite gardens all, will put out a welcome mat. The event, set June 26, is called Hidden Gardens — A Big Sur Garden Tour, and the inspiration behind it is the community's children.

"The people of Big Sur are extremely private. It's almost a parallel universe we live in, with the Nepenthe people, the firefighters, the artists," explains Tom Birmingham, who probably belongs to the former group. Tom managed Nepenthe for 10 years and is married to Erin Gaffill, a member of the Fassett clan that founded and operates the cliffside restaurant. As parents of a son and daughter, the Birminghams feel acutely the shortcomings of "living in paradise."

"Things most people take for granted, we had to build here," Erin explained. Dance lessons, theater workshops, museums — such enrichments called for a substantial drive to the Monterey Peninsula or beyond.

"Once kids reach high school, they're on the school bus three hours a day," Tom noted.

When last year's storm cut off families from the outside for three full months, the Birminghams, along with Lygia Chappellet, launched a school, Escuela del Niño, to take the place of the temporarily closed Captain Cooper School. Out of this effort was born the nonprofit Big Sur Arts Initiative, composed of parents and mentors seeking to enrich children's lives the year 'round.

"More than half the kids at Captain Cooper speak English as a second language," Tom explained. "They are the sons and daughters of dishwashers and service people in Big Sur. Many of our kids are living below the poverty line — in paradise."

"Erin and I decided one year ago to give as much time as we could afford to the kids of Big Sur," he said.

They're not alone. Merrie Potter serves as program coordinator of the Big Sur Arts Initiative (BSAI), and in her case, a garden is the navel of the universe.

"What we realized during the storm was there were so many things missing in this community for children, and we had to provide that ourselves," Merrie notes.

A physical education teacher at Captain Cooper, Merrie spearheaded the revival of a garden there. A plot of land with a breathtaking mountain view, the school garden had been cultivated in fits and starts by students, but eventually deer and weeds triumphed.

Last fall, families worked together to rejuvenate the old garden. They culled stones, turned the soil, constructed a fence and added a watering system to the former "rock garden." Potter chose raised beds "for success," and these are now planted with thriving crops of ollalie and huckleberries, lettuce and radishes peppers, red and white potatoes, rainbow chard and lettuce.

"It's an outdoor classroom," Merrie explained. "And I've never been more proud to be involved in anything. We're teaching children about composting, about putting things back into the soil. The older children have already expressed to me how much it means to them to see the garden happening."

Kindergartners nurtured Monarch butterfly larvae in their classroom and then transferred the chrysalises into the sun-splashed garden outside.

"When the butterflies emerged from the chrysalises, the children went outside and sang a song of good-bye," Merrie recalled. "A little boy said, 'look, they're going home.' This is what it's all about. A 6-year-old boy understands the magic."

Whimsy distinguishes many a colorful Big Sur garden.

The Big Sur Arts Initiative touches the lives of children in other ways. Eleven high school students who attend the K through 12 Pacific Valley School, located far down the coast, visited the Vincent Van Gogh exhibition in Los Angeles, thanks to BSAI.

"Kids lives were changed that weekend. Some of them had never attended a major art exhibition like that one," Tom said.

BSAI has also launched a multi-faceted enrichment campaign that includes theater workshops, a quilting class for parents and children, poetry and music programs. Working with First Night organizers on the peninsula, BSAI kids are hand crafting "A Thousand Books of Dreams" in anticipation of the new millennium. The group scored another first by starting the first-ever Big Sur computer class — open to adults, by the way.

"I have conflicting feelings about Big Sur," Erin asserted. A self-described "restaurant baby" who literally learned to walk while gripping table legs at Nepenthe, she said. "People drop out here. I saw people who were educated and interested in art and literature and they moved here and it all stopped. They'd be sitting at the bar, telling tales of the past. We wanted people to maximize their potential."

One way of "maximizing potential" is through BSAI striving to pay its teachers to teach.

"We sought to professionalize the group," Tom explained. "Part of our mission includes supporting artists to

Hidden Gardens Tour: How To Go

LUNCH PAD for Hidden Gardens — a Big Sur Garden Tour — is the Garden Market at Captain Cooper School. The elementary school is located off Highway 1 in Big Sur, approximately 22 miles south of Carmel's Rio Road, between Andrew Molera State Park and the River Inn.

Only 300 visitors will be admitted to this first-time event, which is a self-driving, self-walking tour. Docents will lead tours of private gardens never opened to the public before. Among these are the gardens at Wild Bird, the landmark home built by Margaret and Nathaniel Owings, and a seven-acre sculpture garden winding through the redwoods beside the Big Sur River.

Tour hours are 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday, June 26, and visitors are encouraged to gather first at Captain Cooper.

There they will encounter a marketplace with plants, garden supplies, food, arts and crafts. Captain Cooper will be the site of a presentation by Elizabeth Murray, author of "Sacred Spaces." MaryLee Sunseri will perform two children's concerts in the afternoon. There will be Fairy Tale Theatre for and by

Esalen gardener found what works for him and the plants

By ANNE PAPINEAU

IN ORDER to partake of a workshop amidst the ethereal setting of Esalen Institute, many are happy to pay hundreds of dollars. But for one day, the grounds, and specifically the gardens, will be open to those who purchase a $30 ticket to Hidden Gardens — A Big Sur Garden Tour. This event, a first, is a benefit for the Big Sur Arts Initiative (see related cover story).

Esalen, sometimes called "the birthplace of the human potential movement," owes much of its reputation to the beauty and fertility of its gardens. Most of the organic produce, prepared and served at the institute, is grown on-site, and planting overseer for the past 25 years is Garden Manager Steve Beck. Beck will lead visitors around the gardens and answer questions during the June 26th tour.

"I grew up in Bismark, the capitol of North Dakota," he explains. "We lived just outside of town on 88 acres of half woods and half fields of Missouri river-bottom. My father was a dentist, but he was a closet farmer."

With his sister and three brothers, Beck learned early how to till the land and plant and harvest the crops.

"We had wheat, alfalfa and a huge orchard, with apples and plums, raspberries, strawberries and rhubarb," he recalled. "In the basement of our house were three enormous freezer chests, so we ate mostly what we grew."

"From the earliest age, I can remember being out picking strawberries and eating more than I put in the basket, and riding a hay rake."

For a man who has guided the gardens of Esalen from being a "sort of '60s curiosity" to a visual and gustatory wonder, Beck's childhood reaction to gardening was, "I hated it. It was a kind of forced labor. I was happy to get away from it all, because it seemed kind of dumb to me."

Beck had already earned a psychology degree and worked a stint at a hospital when he came to Esalen in 1980 to staff the media department. In a curious life twist, he "immediately fell in love with the garden. What I hated so much as a kid suddenly became intriguing. It's kind of addictive — to see what will do better, what to try next. I read everything I could get my hands on, subscribing to about 10 gardening magazines."

He described the paradisiacal gardens of Esalen as "not so much designed, as evolved. If something works, it sticks, and if it doesn't, something new comes in."

On the far north of the property is The Farm, while The Garden is on the south side, by the lodge.

"In some ways, you could say we've a very large backyard garden. We keep a succession of plantings, so things come in one meal at a time. The Farm is done with a tractor, whereas The Garden is all permanent beds and handwork."

Beck is the sole staff gardener. But five to 10 Esalen students typically help him out, and are happy to do so.

"Both of those gardens are right on the cliff, and the dropoff to the ocean is 70 feet below The Farm and 100 feet below The Garden," he said. "Talk about your marine influence. We get the summer fog. The climate never freezes, and it never gets above 70."

These conditions are excellent for growing lettuce, broccoli, spinach, peas, carrots and beets. What they can't nurture are tomatoes, peppers, corn, eggplants and fruit trees. Such produce the Institute must import, usually from Carmel Valley.

About a decade ago, Beck hit upon an excellent use for the many cardboard boxes that come to Esalen. Utilizing several "retired waterbed frames," he constructed a vermiculture site where worms happily reduce the boxes to compost in a few months. Kitchen and gardening trimmings also go into the compost mix.

In an age when consumers complain of produce that looks attractive but is often flavorless, Beck admits that he and his family are "jaded."

"My wife and I have 10 acres near Pfeiffer Beach. We bought it because it's really nice land for gardens. My wife doesn't want the lettuce from the lodge because it was harvested this morning. She wants salad made from the lettuce just picked next to our house.

"To have a really ripened strawberry, they just don't happen in the store," he asserted. "A carrot, a strawberry in the first 10 minutes, is really something else."

From a child who hated farm work, to Esalen's gardener for a quarter of a century, Beck has definitely put down roots.

"It's a life. I couldn't be happier. I do what I like and I get paid for it."

Guest house without the

By MARGOT PETIT NICHOLS

PETERSON CONWAY has spent hundreds of memorable hours in teepees over the years since he was a little boy. Sleeping in one on windy nights is "like being in a prairie schooner," he recalls — an experience he wanted to relive in his very own teepee.

This May, walking among the Carmel Garden Show exhibits at Quail Lodge, Conway stumbled upon a White Buffalo Lodges tipi of authentic design — just what he had been looking for over the years. At last, one would be his. There are three accepted spellings for this dwelling: teepee, teepee and tipi. White Buffalo Lodges has chosen the latter.

The interior designer who chose to showcase her skills with this arresting tipi display is Christine Alexander of Alexander Design Associates, Carmel, who suggests the tipis are ideal as guest room, artist's studio, meditation retreat or as a just-get-away-from-it-all hideaway. There are small 9-foot diameter tipis for children, and seven other sizes up to 24-feet in diameter, ranging in price from $465 to $2,073.

Peterson said it took him and two White Buffalo Lodge men about an hour to erect the 20-foot diameter tipi in a meadow on his 23-acre Jack's Peak property.

Sixteen poles, 24 stakes, a treated canvas cover and liner, 13 willow lacing pins, some hemp rope and a door cover comprise the basic tipi package by White Buffalo Lodges of Livingston, Montana, with a carrying case and instruction book thrown in for good measure.

For the Carmel Garden Show, Alexander created a stunning, self-contained environment together with Paul E. McEnroe Enterprises, Inc. of Monterey, who built the tipi's redwood platform, and John and Deborah Morgan and Jim Williams of Morgan Landscaping/Outdoor Environments of Carmel, who created the pond and waterfall surrounded by birch trees, redwoods and weeping evergreens.

The "Tipi Retreat" caused a stir at the Garden Show, and not unexpectedly won the "Best Use of the Element of Surprise" award in the "Designs for Living" category. The tipi display was a departure for Alexander, who for the past seven years has done both residential and commercial interior design, collaborated with architects, and worked with general contractors in project management for construction.

walnut day bed made up with rich Italian Pratesi linens, a Rose Talow iron chandelier, a drop-leaf table, mirror, walnut twist table, scalloped-backed French upholstered chairs and a number of decorative accessories.

The contrast of the tipi and its contents is not as startling to the senses as one might think. Elegant describes both the tipi itself and the interior enhancements selected by Alexander.

Relaxing beside a firepit with Harpo, his 54-year-old macaw, Peterson Conway enjoys his temporary bed room while the Atlas Peak house is being retrofitted.

Peuben Conway's Australian shepherd enjoys the bucolic meadow view from the tipi's entrance as he stands watch.

Historic Carmel Stone Landmark

Built in the 1930's by early-Carmel master builder, Lee Gottfried, this grand, faded lady faces the sea on an oversized corner lot. Located on Carmel's famed Scenic Road, the property possesses 3+ bedrooms, 4-1 2 baths, guest garden house, 2-car garage, private courtyard, irreplaceable building materials, inside and out, and a flowing floor plan. The views are spectacular. Here's that once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to recreate a masterpiece!

DEL MONTE

Peterson Conway has not chosen to decorate his tipi, which is being used as a sleeping room while his four-bedroom home is being retrofitted from one end to the other. Instead, simplicity rules in the "lodge." Native American blankets cover two mattresses placed on meadow grass, the floor of the tipi. A firepit has been excavated in the middle, and the afternoon The Pine Cone visited, a fire was lighted that warmed the interior's cool spring temperature almost immediately.

Just that morning, Conway, Carmen Osuna, his two sons, a few friends and Conway's 2-year-old godchild, had participated in a dedication of the lodge. A ceremony was enacted which included the burning of sage and sweetgrass while prayers in the Lakota (Sioux) language were offered to the Four Directions, to Mother Earth and Father Sky and Wakan Tanka, the Great Creator, in keeping with Conway's affiliation with the Native American Church.

Raised in North Carolina by a full-blooded Cherokee grandmother until her death, and then by a great aunt in Virginia, Conway later studied at the Sorbonne in Paris, graduating in 1969 with degrees in international relations and languages which he used to good effect as a translator from French to Persian for the United Nations in Afghanistan.

A love of tribal art and ethnic cultures later lead Conway into importing. He opened and managed an import store, Conway of Asia, in Paris for six years and later, in 1973, opened Conway of Asia in Carmel, specializing in Asian antiques with emphasis on spiritual objects. The Carmel store, on Dolores between Ocean and Seventh, has been in continuous operation for 26 years.

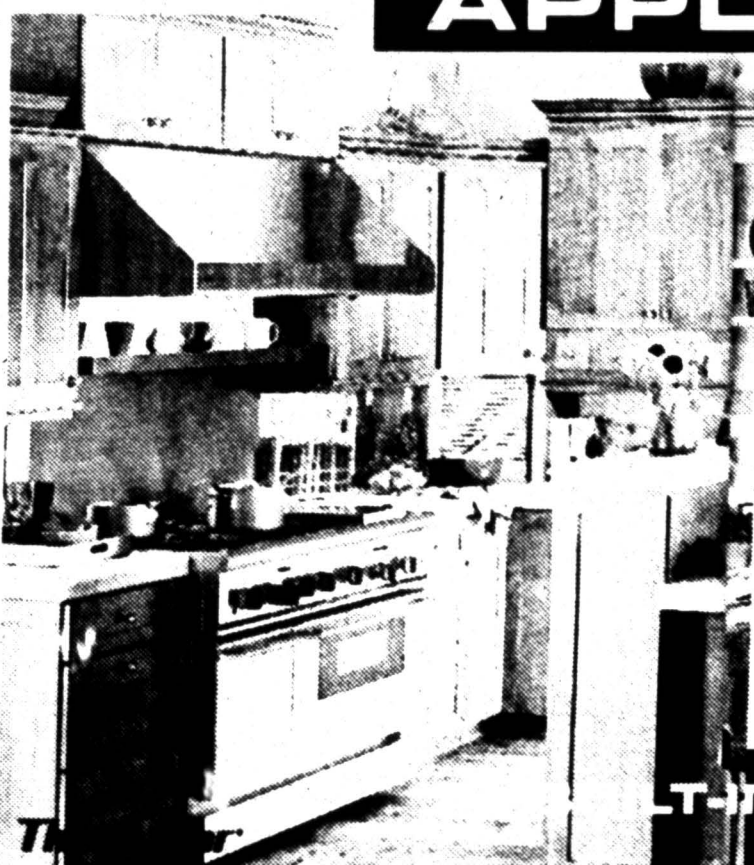

Conway and Osuna travel abroad on buying trips twice a year to Pakistan, India, Nepal, Tibet, Cambodia and Burma.

A pristine meadow setting

The Conway estate in Jacks Peak reflects the art of these countries, with even the driveways and gardens decorated with exotic statues and metalworks. The tipi, in contrast, is pristine, set in a meadow clearing surrounded by tall trees, with a clear view of Carmel and the ocean. At night, Osuna says, they can see lights from fishing boats off Point Lobos.

Animals graze in the various meadows: Two Peruvian llamas, a white Arabian horse named Duke, Kashmir sheep, African pygmy goats — all with their own names — are befriended and occasionally herded by Reuben, Conway's 5-year-old brindled Australian

IN YOUR DREAMS

A white Arabian horse named Duke, two llamas and various sheep and goats graze in the high meadow near Peterson Conway's temporary bedroom.

Sleeping in a tipi on windy nights is 'like being in a prairie schooner.'

shepherd, Harpo, a 54-year-old blue and gold macaw, rides about on Conway's shoulder at home and at the Carmel shop, a loved family member of some 26 years.

For the past 12 to 15 years, Conway has been attending annual pow wows and also spiritual sun dances on the Pine Ridge Indian reservation in South Dakota. This summer, he and Osuma will transport their tipi to Livingston, Montana to a gathering of some 30 lodges. The event is planned to honor the 30th anniversary of the film, "Easy Rider," whose star, Peter Fonda, will attend. Conway will do the cooking.

The gathering is arranged by the White Buffalo Lodges people to whom Conway refers as "spirit-filled."

"They have a love for the land and the culture of the people who originally lived in these tipis," he said. "This will be an adventure of the heart."

For those interested in more information or purchasing a White Buffalo Lodge tipi, contact Christine Alexander, Allied Member, A.S.I.D., of Alexander Design Associates, at P.O. Box 4258, Carmel 93921 or by calling 622-9382.

POLICE LOG

6/2/99. Third and fourth incidents of him shoplifting in the past few days.

THURSDAY, JUNE 3

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Report of two male juveniles in a white Jeep running stop signs and spinning their tires. Area checked, suspects gone upon arrival.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Man pulled over for failing to stop at a stop sign at San Carlos and 13th. A check of his license showed it was expired. He was issued a citation and the car was towed.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Person left a Dolores Street residence, after noticing a housemate was not feeling well. The housemate suffers from numerous medical conditions. At 2345 hours the person returned home and was locked out. The housemate would not answer the door or the phone. Officers were also unable to gain entry and another person with a key could not be contacted. CFD responded to assist in gaining entry through a third floor balcony. The housemate was in deep sleep and in no distress. No further assistance was needed.

Carmel area: Hilltop Place resident reported seeing the shadow of a subject through her bedroom window. Area check was made and nothing suspicious was found.

Carmel Valley: Man found to be driving under the influence on Del Fino Place. Arrested by CHP.

SUPPORT The Pine Cone ADVERTISERS!

Pebble Beach: Woman reported she had not seen a friend since about 1500 hours and was worried about her. She was found at home, OK and asleep.

FRIDAY, JUNE 4

Carmel-by-the-Sea: 1978 Chevy Malibu towed from Ninth and Dolores because it was leaking gas. Unable to contact owners. CFD responded and cleaned up the fuel on the roadway surface.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Contacted a man who appeared to be intoxicated. He stated he was going to sleep in his truck. When he was advised of the code regarding sleeping in a vehicle he agreed to take a cab home, where his girlfriend was waiting for him. His truck was left parked in the Wells Fargo parking lot after being secured.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: CHOMP requested a welfare check on a Santa Lucia resident because of a Lifeline activation. She was found all right in her home. Alarm was set off accidentally. It was reset.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Report of a driver in a green vehicle honking the horn excessively. Area check made, vehicle gone upon arrival.

Pebble Beach: Sunset Lane resident reported his wife has not been taking her medication and has, therefore, threatened to burn the house down and jump off of their balcony. She was transported by ambulance to Garden Pavilion.

Carmel area: Anonymous person reported an 11-year-old juvenile reportedly mentioned hurting other people with a knife. He did not possess a knife and the parents were informed of the incident.

Carmel Valley: Woman reported being concerned about several phone calls and contacts she has had with a man who admitted he was a sex offender.

Carmel area: San Marcus resident reported finding a flaming bag of dog excrement on the porch. Fire was extinguished without injury or damage.

Carmel area: Responded to a 911 hang-up and found a rear door at a Shafter Way residence unsecured. A check of the residence revealed no one was home. House secured.

Carmel Valley: Hitchcock Canyon resident reported a suspicious person nearby. The man turned out to be someone there to visit an employer who also lives in the area.

SATURDAY, JUNE 5

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Person warned for parking on Scenic after hours. Subject meditating.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Report of an unwanted person at a local inn. She left the inn when requested. She had wanted to use the bathroom and did so. She was given a courtesy transport to the Greyhound Bus terminal at her request.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Report of people yelling in their room. Upon arrival they were found to be intoxicated and were arguing. No physical confrontation had occurred. They were counseled about their behavior. No further problems noted.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Unattended child walked away from a local inn where the parent was working. Parent advised not to bring the child to work, and that Child Protective Services will be notified if the child is left unattended again.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Welfare check of a Santa Lucia resident requested. Her phone ringer was turned down and she was having problems with her hearing aid. She was unable to hear the phone ring. May need a new hearing aid. Follow-up with doctor.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Report of a person climbing a utility pole. Area check made, no subject seen in the area.

Pebble Beach: Sunridge Road resident reported hearing noises in her house while she was taking a shower. House searched, nothing found.

Carmel Valley: Man stopped on Carmel Valley Road at Meadows Road for CVC violations. He was subsequently arrested by the CHP for driving under the influence of an alcoholic beverage.

Carmel Valley: Woman reported finding a clear plastic baggie containing a white powder substance off of Los Laureles Grade. Upon testing the substance it was determined to be laundry detergent.

Carmel Valley: Vehicle parked at Del Fino and Pilot towed and stored for expired registration.

Carmel area: Man reported someone was on Odello Ranch property without permission. No prosecution desired. He left without incident.

Carmel area: Two juveniles built and fired a handmade potato launcher. They were firing the gun to the rear of the Carmel River School. They were contacted and the potato gun confiscated.

Pebble Beach: Pebble Beach Security reported a loud party at a Crest Road residence. Contact made with the resident, who ended the party.

Pebble Beach: Pebble Beach Security reported seeing several juveniles drinking in a parked vehicle near Spanish Bay beach. Contacted four female juveniles and two male adults. The females were released into the custody of their parents.

Carmel area: Carmel Riviera resident reported two vehicles parked in front of her house. One was a red pick-up truck. A man got out and walked up her driveway and looked into her car with a flashlight. He then knocked on her front door, but she did not answer. The man left after having problems starting his car.

CARMEL

CHARM & PRIVACY! Gracious home located near town & Carmel Beach. Situated on a landscaped double-sized lot. Three bedrooms, 2 baths. The handsome living room, with its elegant fireplace and bay window welcome you as you enter the front door. Formal dining, well designed kitchen with built-ins, hardwood floors under newer carpet, spacious brick patio, two-car garage. This home has great curb appeal and is in move-in condition. $595,000.

RETRO '50'S! Museum quality 1950's mini-home features carport, aluminum windows, tar and gravel roof, slab and an open floor plan with bedroom and bath. Great south-of-Ocean-Avenue, easy-walk-to-town situation on a lovely treed parcel with potential. Numerous updates -- better than a motel! $369,000.

CARMEL HILLS! Craftsman home built to take advantage of the mountain and valley views on a fabulous lot. Wood interiors with built-ins, updated kitchen, skylights and a large deck are among the fabulous features. There are 3 bedrooms, 2 baths on the second floor, plus a 580 +/- sq.ft. studio with bath. Lots of possibilities in this quality home. $545,000.

"SEA FOREVER!" Tastefully remodeled contemporary on an oversized lot in wonderful Carmel Woods. This 3-bedroom, 3-bath home has sweeping ocean vistas, a completely new kitchen, family room and dining area, separate guest quarters, deck & attached 2-car garage. Ready to occupy. $849,000.

GREAT LOCATION & VALUE! Lots of space in this two-story home in a quiet, forested, out-of-the-way setting, just a pleasant walk to town. This low-maintenance, townhouse style home even has a two-car garage -- hard to find in Carmel. The 3-bedroom, 3-bath floor plan offers great versatility, and the spacious, bright living room with hardwood floors is highlighted by a used-brick fireplace and south-facing deck. $599,000.

COTTAGE ON THE CORNER! Charming early Carmel cottage in a coveted, walk-to-town, south-of-Ocean Avenue location. This 1923 stucco with peaked roof and dormer windows sits behind a grapestake fence on a 7000 sq.ft. garden lot. There are 2 bedrooms with space-saver closets and deck access. The third bedroom, reminiscent of a doll house, is lofted over the dining room, and the office is over the eat-in kitchen. $895,000.

"CIMARRON!" Originally built as a Taos pueblo for actor Richard Dix. "Cimarron" today pays homage to its southwestern heritage in a stylish and elegant manner, suitable for its ocean-front setting. Two massive bay windows function as panoramic seascape paintings, making the shore and ocean a breathtaking part of the living room & master bedroom. A cozy guest cottage overlooks the courtyard garden. Enchantment is guaranteed. $4,195,000.

CARMEL HIGHLANDS

OCEANFRONT DREAM! This oceanfront home offers spectacular views of the coastline: Point Lobos to the north, Wildcat Cove below, and the Highlands landscape above. The kitchen, living room/dining room and master suite all face the view. There are 2 additional bedrooms, a cozy den/family room & total of 3 baths. Plus an oceanside deck & leeward side gazebo. The one-acre site is fully fenced & landscaped. $2,425,000.

OCEAN VIEWS! Imagine a classic Cape Cod home in absolutely pristine condition and located near the ocean in a prime neighborhood. Following extensive remodeling, this house has smart interior decors: spacious living/dining room, hardwood floors & Berber carpeting, 3 bedrooms plus den, 3 full baths, private decks & beautiful landscaping (approximately 1/2 acre). $999,000.

CARMEL VALLEY

SLEEPY HOLLOW ESTATE! A fabulous estate on six acres. It offers a charming Normandy home with 5 bedrooms, 6 baths and 2 half baths. The grounds include a pond with fountain and lights, swimming pool, croquet lawn, children's soccer field, guest cottage and 2-bedroom staff quarters over the two-car garage and exercise room. Available is an adjoining 5-acre equestrian parcel which is not included in this price. $2,600,000.

C.V. RANCH! Enjoy the serene golf views from this attractive home. Overlooking the second green, this townhome features vaulted ceilings, an open floor plan, new carpeting, leaded-glass windows, large master suite, an additional bedroom and 2 baths. This end unit is adjacent to greenbelt areas which enhance the private ambiance of this residence. $569,000.

BUY & DIVIDE FOR PROFIT! Own the heart of Carmel Valley Village and add extra money to your income. Five parcels include restaurants, offices, gym and 1.5-acre parcel with 1.5 acre feet of water. A good investment for the enterprising person. $2,900,000.

PACIFIC GROVE

STROLL TO BEACH! Romantic Victorian with bay view roof-top deck. This turn-of-the-century beauty is just 1/2 block from Lovers Point, town and recreation trails. The updated interior features a remodeled kitchen, master suite with Jacuzzi tub and solarium. This elegant 2-bedroom, 2-1/2-bath home draws inspiration from the early 1900's. $450,000.

DELIGHTFUL VICTORIAN! It's your chance to own a bit of vintage Pacific Grove with this 1889 Victorian. Cute and cozy with 2 bedrooms and 1 bath, its great location is near town and the beach. Enjoy the backyard and its own deck as a vacation or starter home. $285,000.

NEAR TOWN & TRAIL! Adorable 3-bedroom, 2-bath cottage full of charming touches. Older cottage extensively remodeled seven years ago. This home offers character and is in turn-key condition. The second-floor master bedroom suite has bay views and a deck. Two fireplaces, a garage, and a short walk to town & recreation trail make this property a gem! $469,000.

PEBBLE BEACH

IDEAL COUNTRY CLUB LOCATION! Appealing contemporary, with 3 bedrooms & 2 baths. One half block to the golf course, a few blocks to the ocean -- water views from the living room, master bedroom & kitchen. A 'reverse floor plan', high ceilings, an open - free-flowing upstairs - 2 bedrooms, a bath, & a family room or office downstairs -- in an 'ideal Country Club location'. $695,000.

JUST LISTED! In a prestigious location, close to golf and the shore, this home offers ocean views from the living room and master bedroom. The contemporary home features an inverted floor plan of 3 bedrooms and 2-1/2 baths. There is a lovely deck on which one can enjoy the mild climate on the Monterey Peninsula. $895,000.

AWAITING YOUR TOUCH! Don't miss this opportunity to remodel, expand or just move into this 2-bedroom, 2-bath home in upper Pebble Beach. The landscaped grounds, complete with mature shrubbery, private gardens and circular drive, extend a warm welcome to all who visit. A little T.L.C. or a major renovation will make any owner proud. $498,000.

HOME SWEET HOME! Looking for the ultimate in casual, comfortable elegance--the perfect place to call home? You've found it! Recently remodeled and expanded, this delightful one-level 3-bedroom, 2-1/5-bath residence offers an excellent floor plan; wonderfully spacious rooms--formal living, casual family and dining; and new double-paned windows, wood floors and roof; amenities galore, and 1.3 Pebble Beach acres. $1,195,000.

OUTSTANDING ELEGANT HOME! This elegant, yet cozy home offers numerous updates and greenbelt views. Discover the spacious two-story floor plan with vaulted ceilings throughout. The solarium dining room enhances your dining experience. A variety of living options are possible with a master suite on each level. A total of 4 bedrooms, 3-1/2 baths help make this gorgeous home ideal for gracious living. $810,000.

FRENCH COUNTRY HOME! Located in the sunbelt estate area above The Lodge is this gracious 3-bedroom, 3-bath home on an acre with garden courtyard entry. Spacious rooms, elegant appointments, appealing country kitchen, luxurious master suite with his/hers' closets. Charm, quality and a peek of the ocean. $1,550,000.
